NONE OF OUR BUSINESS WHAT KAISER WROTE ON NICARAGUA, SAYS GERMAN GOVERNMENT

SPECIAL CABLE TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

BERLIN, July 12.—Defiance of the Monroe doctrine was sounded by the German Foreign office in the following statement issued this evening:

"Germany refuses to recognize any right on the part of the United States to supervise her diplomatic relations with other countries, Central and South American countries in general, and Nicaragua in particular.

"Germany's recognition of President Madriz is a matter that concerns herself and Nicaragua, but which concerns no third person or power."

GRAND TRUNK IS A WINNER OVER THE NEW HAVEN

Rebuking Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven by declaring that the railroad field of service in Massachusetts is "the territory of the Commonwealth, and not preempted by any railroad control," the Board of Railroad Commissioners to-day handed down a decision granting the petition of the Grand Trunk for the right to build from Palmer to Blackstone. The Commissioners refused the petition of the New Haven for permission to build in practically the same territory.

NEW HAVEN TALKS OF "PRIORITY."

President Mellen, through his attorneys, had told the Railroad Commission that if the Grand Trunk were permitted to build the New Haven wouldn't care to. The New Haven talked of "priority of occupancy."

The Grand Trunk, first to file a petition, proposed to build whether the New Haven was granted permission or not.

The decision is double-headed. The Grand Trunk wins and the New Haven loses.

The Railroad Commission will issue a certificate of public exigency to the "Southern Railroad Corporation"—really the Grand Trunk—for the purpose of operating a railroad from Palmer to a point on the Rhode Island boundary line in Blackstone.

Filed Rival Requests.

The roads had filed rival requests for the same territory. The Grand Trunk, desiring to get into Providence, R. I., and having been granted a Rhode Island charter from the Legislature already came as far as Palmer over the line of the [illegible] Northern. The New London & Northern is leased for 99 years to [illegible], which practically belongs to the Grand Trunk.

"Let them have a Rhode Island charter if you want to," President Mellen of the New Haven said in Providence, "We'll take care of them outside of Rhode Island."

The New Haven followed the petition of the Grand Trunk by proposing a new line of its own from Southbridge up to Palmer. Mellen's attorneys talked of "priority." They wanted the Grand Trunk kept out. If the Grand Trunk were to come in, they said, the New Haven wouldn't [illegible] to build.

The new Grand Trunk line will be operated in the towns of Palmer, Monson, Brimfield, Sturbridge, Southbridge, Dudley, Webster, Douglas, Uxbridge and Blackstone.

"The territory," says the Commission in to-day's decision, "is served by three roads. Compared with many other areas in this Commonwealth of like population and industrial activity, railroad facilities are meagre. It is agreed by both parties and a large number of witnesses that public convenience and necessity require additional railroad facilities in this territory. With this view we are in accord, and find that a certificate of public exigency should issue for the construction of a railroad.

"It is to be observed that the actual route of the Southern New England railway in the state of Rhode Island is dependent upon the action of the public authorities of this Commonwealth, and without the approval of the application of the Southern New England Railroad Corporation now before us a railroad is unlikely to be constructed under existing legislation in Rhode Island.

"If the application of the Southern New England Railroad Corporation is granted, a connection is assured between the railway authorized by the state of Rhode Island and the New London Northern Railroad, now a part of the Grand Trunk system, thereby securing to the people of this Commonwealth and others large additional transportation facilities by a through line to and fro from the north and west.

State Is Sole Owner.

"In any investigation of the question before us, it must be taken as fundemental that the field of service sought by both petitioners is the territory of the Commonwealth and not pre-empted by any railroad control.

"It is therefore ordered that a certificate of public exigency be issued to the Southern New England railroad corporation, and that the petition of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company for a certificate of public exigency be refused."

8 ARE DEAD FIRE STILL BURNING

ST. JOHN, N. B., July 12.—Seven men and a baby perished in a great fire which is blotting out the town of Campbellton, and the village of Roundsville, near there, is said to be burning. From 4,000 to 5000 people are homeless to-day. Under the blazing sun hundreds of more are in terror of their lives and dreading the probable destruction of their homes.

Richardsville is two miles from Campbellton. It is believed that the great whirlwind of blazing fagots and splinters which are shooting high in the air set it on fire. If there is loss of life there it is not known.

The fire is still raging. Many persons are missing. The fire started at 2 o'clock yesterday morning in the Richardson Company shingle mills. The fuel went up like powder and nothing could stay the flames, fanned as they were by a strong wind.

Searching parties are now looking through the ruins for dead or maimed. Other parties are organizing into relief squads to give the homeless aid. Wire communication with Campbellton has been cut off by the fire and the railroad bridge has gone, so that further aid cannot go there by that way.

Two trains, the Ocean Limited express and a local passenger, leaving Moncton for Campbellton, were unable to proceed because of the burning of the railroad bridge over Mill Creek just east of the town. Two banks, three large lumber mills, two churches, the Intercolonial Railway station, telephone, telegraph and many other large business buildings were burned, and the fire is still eating its way in the outskirts of the town.

The burning brands caused the destruction of many farmhouses and farm buildings over a large radius. Communication is so difficult that the real extent of the loss may not be known for days.

FALL RIVER MILLS ARE REOPENED TO-DAY

FALL RIVER, July 12.—The majority of the woolen mills, which were closed down here last week, resumed operations to-day, many of them on the five-day schedule. The Iron Works Mill plant will resume work Monday, to run on the alternate week plan, while the Algonquin and American Printing Companies plants will continue shut down for some time, leaving a large number of persons still unemployed. Work has begun on the new waste mill at Assonet, and a new 1,500-horsepower engine is being installed in No. 1 of the Stafford mills.

Germany Explains the Kaiser's Madriz Letter

BERLIN, July 12.—The foreign office has given out an authorized statement respecting the letter of Emperor William to President Madriz of Nicaragua. Reports have reached Berlin that attempts were being made in America to construe this letter as an indorsement by the Emperor of the Madriz party. The statement follows:

"Madriz gave notice of his election, upon undertaking the presidency, to the Emperor in the usual written form. The customary formal reply was prepared by the foreign office. It was not an autograph letter, but was simply signed by the Emperor. The address, 'great and good friend,' was in accordance with official courtesy. Any intervention by Germany in Nicaraguan affairs neither followed nor is intended. Germany neither sought, nor designs to seek, a coaling station. Rumors of Germany's intentions toward the Galapagos Islands are equally without foundation, as are all suggestions that the German Government has in any wise modified the cultivation of friendly relations toward the United States."

The Emperor's letter was dated April 26 and said:

"I am informed by your letter of the 27th of December of last year that your Excellency was elected President of the Republic by the merited confidence of your fellow-citizens and that your Excellency entered upon your most honorable duties on the 21st of that month."

An epression of the usual diplomatic good wishes and desire for the cultivation of good relations between the two countries followed.

FOUR SPILLED, TWO INJURED, IN AUTO CRASH

Four men were given a severe shake-up, two of them being badly bruised about the body, when a big touring car in which they were returning from Nantasket to Boston skidded and smashed into a telegraph pole at Washington street and Addison Park, Quincy, early to-day. The machine was wrecked.

The four men were hurried into the home of Elmer S. Ricker, near the scene of the accident. Two of them left immediately. The other pair, after being given medical attention by Drs. S. C. Hardwick and Fred E. Jones of Quincy, bustled out of the house, and made off in a taxicab. The men refused to give their names.

The speedometer which was rescued from the wreckage showed, according to the police, that the car must have been traveling between fifty and sixty miles an hour when it collided with the pole. The four were were thrown out into the street. Passage at the Addison Park corner was made hazardous by the fact that Quincy is making extensive improvements in the section.

It is said the driver of the car, before leaving in a taxicab, looked the machine over carefully, picked up every means of identification he could find, and then disappeared. The police found the rear registry number, 12,501, Massachusetts, in the wreck. Communication with the State Highway Commission showed the automobile belonged to Mrs. Adelaide V. White, No. 535 Beacon street, Back Bay, Boston.

CRANE VISITS TAFT BEFORE GOLF GAME

BEVERLY, July 12.—President Taft was up early this morning, but had hardly finished his light breakfast which followed his usual exercise when he received a call from Senator Crane. The Senator first talked for some time with Secretary Norton, but later had a conference with the President. The tariff was one of the chief things that were discussed. It is also believed that the two talked about the Congressional campaign.

After the conference with Senator Crane the President left for the Myopia Hunt Club links. There he met John Hays Hammond, who had been preparing for the President with a few practice holes. They chatted for a few moments after Mr. Taft arrived and then the two started their game.

Later to-day the President will confer with Attorney-General Wickersham and Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor. Secretary Nagel is expected to talk over his proposed trip to Alaska, which he takes in about a month with the President.

MAN WHO FLEW ACROSS CHANNEL DASHED TO DEATH

BOURNEMOUTH, England, July 12.—Charles Stewart Rolls, the famous English aviator, who won the honor of being the only man to make a round trip across the English Channel from England to France, was killed to-day in the aviation meet here.

While flying in a Wright machine in the alighting competition for a prize of $1,250, his aeroplane suddenly turned a somersault, crashed to the ground and crushed the aviator to death directly opposite the grand stand.

GREAT CROWD HORROR STRICKEN BY ACCIDENT.

The stand was filled with representatives of English society, who had been attracted to the contest by the fact that Rolls was to compete to-day. Many of them were personally acquainted with or friends of the daring aviator. They cheered him as he arose in the air to a height of 100 feet and the cheers continued as he made one circle of the aviation ground. The cheers were silenced suddenly when it was noticed that he was having trouble.

By this time he had ascended to a height of 125 feet. Almost immediately after the first signs of trouble were noticed the aeroplane turned a complete somersault and then plunged straight down. Rolls attempted to extricate himself, but the drop was too swift. The edge of the machine caught him as the two came to the ground together, and fatally crushed him. His limbs were fractured and he died within a few moments after the aeroplane was lifted from his body.

Many of the women in the grand stand shrieked frantically as the aviator was seen to fall. Then several of them fainted while their men companions rushed onto the field to give aid to the stricken man. They were immediately driven back by the police.

The meet, which opened so auspiciously yesterday, when J. A. Drexel, the young American aviator, broke all English records for altitude flights, was marked by a serious accident immediately upon the resumption of flights to-day. M. Audemars, a French aviator, fell in his initial flight and was badly hurt.

French Aviator May Recover.

M. Audemars was using a miniature Demoiselle monoplane of the type invented by Santos Dumont. The machine whirled around like a top in its fall. Audemars was rushed to a hospital where, after a preliminary examination, it was stated he had a chance to recover.

Rolls saw the accident to Audemars, but after extending sympathy to the injured man, mounted his own machine. On his flight around the ground Rolls attained terrific speed.

He had just started his descent to the ground, still at the same speed, when a sharp cracking sound was heard. The cause of this was not understood at first, but it was attributed to the motor.

Upon investigation after the accident, however, it was found that the tail of the biplane had broken. The disaster is attributed to a slight fault in the material of the machine which left the biplane unable to bear the strain of the sixty miles an hour speed at which Rolls was flying. The machine was smashed into a crumpled mass when it was swooped to the ground, and can never be repaired.

Medical examination of Rolls showed that in addition to his other injuries his head had been crushed. The ten thousand spectators who came here in holiday mood to watch the contests left immediately after the accident, and flying was abandoned for the day.

MRS. YOUNG DENIES ELECTION CHARGES

CHICAGO, July 12.—Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, Chicago's first woman superintendent of schools, on her return from Boston with new honors as the first woman president of the National Education Association, made a final denial of charges made against her in Boston. "It is preposterous to charge that I used money to win the presidency of the association," she said. "I understand that it was an unprecedented honor conferred upon me and I am one of the happiest women in Chicago to-day, despite the nasty things they say about me."

OUST MAYOR, ARREST FIVE FOR LYNCHING

NEWARK, O., July 12.—Before he had been in office an hour, J. N. Ankele, the vice mayor, elevated to the office of chief executive of Newark upon the suspension of Mayor Herbert Atherton, by Governor Harmon, had summarily removed Chief of Police Zergelbel and Police Captain Robert Bell.

He gave as his grounds for removal the non-enforcement of the county option law which resulted in the lynching of Detective Carl Etherington Friday night. He appointed Charles Hindell, a former deputy sheriff, as chief, and Patrolman Charles Swank as captain. He gave them orders to commence the immediate enforcement of all laws.

Elmaline Watha, aged fifty-one, a negro from Hayti, was arrested to-day as the ringleader of the lynch mob. Welden Dennis, Charles Bagley and Edward Willard were arrested to-day on information sent from Columbus. Levi Valentine is also under arrest.

The police say they hold evidence that Vance Miller, a negro, under arrest, wielded the hammer that struck Detective Etherington before the latter was strung up.

Mayor Atherton upon receipt of a telegram from Governor Harmon immediately turned over his office to Ankele.

"I will, of course, put up a defence," he said. "I have a witness who will testify that the local 'Dry' leaders refuse point blank to file charges against 'speak easies' with me, because they did not want me to have the credit of cleaning up the town. I will not step down tamely."

Health and Beauty Secrets

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Cinderella: Merely because your husband is hopelessly bald after wasting so much money buying ready-prepared hair-tonics is no reason why you should neglect your hair. By simply adding a half pint water to one ounce quinzoin dissolved in a half pint alcohol, you can make a quinine hair tonic that will positively destroy the germs in the scalp, stop all irritation, splitting and falling hair, remove dandruff and put your scalp in a healthy condition. This tonic will not stain the hair and will prove very refreshing and invigorating; rub it into the hair roots about twice a week and it will make your hair soft and glossy.

R. F. D.: Yes, a white summer dress makes a stout girl look larger. You can reduce your weight if you will dissolve four ounces of parnotis in 1½ pints of hot water and take a tablespoonful before each meal for two or three weeks. This harmless recipe cuts down flesh rapidly without any injurious effect whatever, and you will feel better when you are rid of that superfluous fat.

H. D. C.: This is the recipe for spurmax complexion beautifier you say all your friends are talking about, but it is not new and there is no reason why your druggist should not know about it: Dissolve four ounces of spurmax in a half-pint of hot water and add two teaspoonsful of glycerine. Put in a bottle and shake well and it is ready for use. Your druggist can get the spurmax from his wholesaler if he doesn't carry it in stock. Yes, this lotion should be used instead of face powder. Apply it to the face, neck and forearms with the palm of the hand and rub until dry. It will not rub off or show and "holds" against perspiration. It will make even a dark and oily skin look fresh and youthful.

E. W.: Why don't you try going without spectacles for a while? You say there is no constitutional defect in your eyes, and that spectacles make you look ten years older than you really are. Let me print alone and drop in each eye daily a few drops of a simple eye tonic made by dissolving an ounce of crystos in a pint of water. This tonic rests tired eyes, relieves redness and inflammation, and strengthens weak eyesight. It has proven so beneficial as an eye remedy that many oculists now recommend it extensively, and I know it will help your eyes greatly.

[illegible] with a good grease-[illegible] is the best preventative in the world against wrinkles and the appearance of age. It keeps the skin taut and clean and the flesh firm and free from flabbiness. Get from your druggist one ounce of almozoin, dissolve it in a half-pint of cold water, add two teaspoonsful of glycerine, stir well and let stand over night. This home-made cream cleanses the pores as nothing else can, for it takes out dirt and grime that soap and water never reach. It removes blackheads and prevents their return for it reduces the size of the pores and makes the skin finer in texture. I have a friend, who is a grandmother, whose complexion rivals that of a sixteen-year-old girl and she never used anything except almozoin cream to preserve her youthful skin.

J. E. M.: The electric needle for the removal of superfluous hairs is an expensive, painful and time-consuming operation. A much easier and far less expensive method is the application of delatone, although delatone costs a dollar an ounce at retail. One ounce is all you will need, however, for even should the hairs return after the first application they will be light-colored, thin and straggly—and the second or third application will rid you of them permanently. Just mix a little delatone with enough water to make a paste, cover the hairs with this paste and let it remain two or three minutes. Then wipe off and wash the skin with warm water.

A. F. D.: You are using too much canthrox for one shampoo. My recipe stated plainly "one teaspoonful to a cup of hot water," not a tablespoonful. No, the quantity you have been using will not injure your hair in the least, for canthrox is in no way harmful. It will not cause the hair to become streaky, dull or brittle, or split at the ends, as some soaps do. But canthrox lathers so freely and cleanses the hair and scalp so thoroughly that it is unnecessary to use more than a teaspoonful for a shampoo. I was pleased to read that you like it because it dries quickly and leaves your hair so bright, soft and fluffy.

A. A.: Of course, you cannot look bright and bonny while you feel so utterly prostrated and miserable. Pimples, blotches and "puffy eyes" are usually an indication of inactive liver, deranged digestion and impure blood. Get your stomach and liver in normal action, and they will eliminate the impurities in your blood. This old-fashioned home-made system tonic has helped others and may help you—it certainly is worth trying: Dissolve one ounce of kardene and one-half cup of sugar in a half-pint of alcohol and add enough hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. When your health is good, you will not be vexed with a spotted and dingy complexion.

AWAIT ORDER OF KNOX TO ACT IN PITTMAN CASE

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The removal of William Pittman, the Boston engineer who is held prisoner by the Madriz police in Nicaragua, from Bluefields Bluff to Managua, has stirred the State department to fresh consideration of his case. Several consultations have been held on possible action by the United States.

Acting Secretary of State Wilson has called in his international law advisers to assist him in arriving at a decision in the matter.

Word may come from Secretary Knox, now at Valley Forge, Penn., in regard to the course to be pursued.

It is generally believed that the department will be content with instructing United States Consul Olivaires at Managua to insist again upon fair treatment for Pittman, and to watch the procedure at Managua with a view to guarding against injustice.

Representives here of Madriz claim that the Managua government was under no obligations to keep Pittman at the bluff. They point out that as early as March this government was notified that Madriz had ordered his subordinates not to act summarily with Americans captured, but to send them forthwith to Managua. That step was taken, it was explained, to insure the safekeeping of the prisoners.

Mail reports which have reached the department describe the efforts of Madriz to raise money. Forced loans, it is said, are being exacted, particularly from those suspected of being hostile to the Madriz government. The most frequent procedure is reported to be to make a demand for a loan, one-half to be paid within twenty-four hours and the remainder in three days, with an increase of 25 per cent. in the event that payment is not forthcoming.

Police or soldiers surround the house of the victim and shut off all means of securing food and other necessities if the money is not paid. In one instance, at least, it is said, the loan demanded amounted to $10,000.

RECORD FOR IDLE SPINDLES SINCE '61

Figures just secured by the mill interests show that as a result of the July shut-down, the percentage of idle cotton spindles in the United States is larger than at any time since the Civil War. The figures give the total number of spindles in the country as 28,000,000. Of this number it is estimated that 21,000,000 are idle. Thus 75 per cent. of the spindles in the United States have been idle since the fourth. While many of the mills are now starting up a further shut-down is planned for August.

STRIKE OF GARMENT WORKERS NEARS END

NEW YORK, July 12.—A stampede of manufacturers to sign agreements with the 80,000 striking garment workers came to-day and the officials of the union predicted that the strike would be won within three days. As soon as the strike committee of the strikers opened sessions at the Victoria Hotel to-day the manufacturers began to arrive to meet them and sign agreements. The strike here to-day caused 1,000 cloak makers in Newark, N. J., to quit work.

KERR IS MELROSE'S NEW POLICE CHIEF

After being without a chief of police for fifteen months, Melrose again has a head of the department, for George E. Kerr, a Boston constable, recently appointed chief in Melrose, was sworn into office to-day by City Clerk W. De Haven Jones. By the end of the week Chief Kerr will make a general shift of officers, it is expected. He stated to-day that for a few days he would content himself with looking into the needs of the department.

GAIN FLESH AND STRENGTH IN SUMMER
Best Time of Year to Build Up Run-Down Systems.

The best chance for those who are weak and run down to build up the system and gain flesh and strength is during the summer time. The best tonic and body builder for such conditions is Father John's Medicine, because of its pure and wholesome, nourishing food elements and because of its freedom from alcohol or dangerous, weakening stimulants. Remember that Father John's Medicine has a history of half a century of success as a tonic and body builder, giving flesh and strength to those who are weak and run down.

CONFERENCE OF REPUBLICS IS OPEN TO-DAY

BUENOS AYRES, July 12.—The fourth international conference of American republics opened in this city to-day and probably will continue for six weeks. Because of the troubled conditions in Nicaragua and other of the Central American states, this is expected to be the most important conference yet held. The official opening came at 4 o'clock this afternoon, with an address of welcome by Dr. V. De la Plaza, the Argentine foreign minister. Henry White, former American Ambassador to France, will respond for the delegates.

Other delegates in attendance are: Professor Paul Reinsch of the University of Wisconsin, Professor David Kinley of the University of Illinois, Professor John Bassett Moore of Columbia University, Professor Bernard Moses of the University of California, E. B. Moore, U. S. Commissioner of Patents; J. B. Quintero, New Orleans; Colonel Enoch Crowder, Assistant Judge Advocate-General of the United States Army; Louis Nixon, New York; Professor J. B. Shepherd, Columbia University; Cabot Ward, ex-Secretary of State of Porto Rico, and W. T. S. Doyle, assistant chief of the division of Latin-America Affairs, State Department.

La Razen, an influential journal, to-day denies that report that the Argentine Republic, Brazli and Chile are planning an alliance to offset the power and influence of the United States in South American affairs. The International Scientific Congress, held in connection with the conference, held its first session at the Colon Theatre to-day.

ORANGEMEN ON LAKE PEARL OUTING

Some 2,500 Orangemen, including their wives, children and friends, journeyed to Lake Pearl to-day, where their annual outing was held. The party formed in Copley Square in the morning, and headed by a band marched through the principal streets to South Station, where two special trains left at 9:30, arriving at the lake at 11 o'clock. A banquet was served, and speeches made by Chairman Thomas Milligen of Boston, who was in charge of the outing; George Davison, secretary of the organization; Chief Marshal Joseph Hamilton; William Davison, and M. A. Ross, chairman of the general advisory committee. During the afternoon men, both young and old, played baseball and engaged in track sports, while the women and little girls also had their share of this form of sport, prizes in the shape of silver badges and cups being given to the winners in the various events.

The committee in charge of the general arrangements of the outing was composed of Thomas Milligen, George Davison and William Dawson, while the committee on sports was made up of Joseph Hamilton, O. L. Floyd, T. G. Love, Charles McKee and A. E. Watson.

FINED FOR GIVING LIQUOR TO HUSBAND

Mrs. Mary E. McNally of Arlington avenue, Charlestown, was in the District Court to-day charged with serving liquor to her husband at the police station. He was arrested on the charge of stealing scrap iron from the Boston & Maine railroad, and was in a cell at the City Square station, when the wife appeared there with a milk jar containing what appeared to be coffee alone. She asked that it be given to her husband. The police say that the jar contained a half-pint of whiskey colored with coffee. McNally tried to save his wife in court by stating that he had placed the whiskey in the coffee pot last night. The woman was fined $10 for attempting to give liquor to a prisoner, and her husband received a like fine for the theft of the scrap iron.

THINK HEAT VICTIM ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

BROCKTON, July 12.—Joseph N. Mayo, 70, a retired manufacturer of this city, was found lying in the yard of Mrs. A. A. Keith, at No. 729 North Cary street, with a bad gash in his throat. A razor was found by his side. The police who are investigating the case believe that Mayo cut himself. He is in a critical condition. Mr. Mayo, who lives at No. 880 North Main street with his daughter, the wife of George A. Carter, a tack manufacturer, suffered from sunstroke last Friday.

COLOR PHOTOGRAPHY AN AID TO SURGEONS

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—Color photography is the latest adjunct to the surgeon's knife. Instead of operating immediately, the up-to-date surgeon now notifies the attending physician that he wants an "autochrome," or photographic plate in colors, of the diseased condition of the patient. This he studies before he decides when to operate and what he wants to cut away. Several Philadelphia physicians have been making these photographs.

HELD ON CHARGE AS A PICKPOCKET

Harry Davis, alias "Sam" and Harry Cohen, claiming to live at No. 316 Harrison avenue, pleaded not guilty in the Roxbury District Court today, to the charge of stealing a gold watch, valued at $50, from John W. Heardy of Waterville, Me., on Huntington avenue, near the baseball grounds yesterday afternoon. He was held for a further hearing Wednesday, bail being fixed at $500.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight, London Time

Germany Says She Will Give No Aid to Madriz.

BERLIN.—Germany, officially or otherwise, will give Madriz no encouragement in the warfare he is waging in Nicaragua. Nothing will be done by the Emperor or by any of his representatives in any way to embarrass or give offence to the United States. This was semi-officially announced to-day, following the unauthorized statements circulated in America yesterday to the effect that Madriz had been assured by Emperor William that he had the moral support of Germany in his fight to enforce his authority over Nicaragua and that the Emperor's communication contained thinly veiled intimations that such support might develop into material aid.

HER RIGHT SIDE WAS PARALYZED
A Case at Auburn, Me., Which Shows How Exhausted Nerves May Be Toned Up.

The basis of the tonic treatment of nervous diseases with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which is everywhere meeting with the greatest success, is to supply and keep up the nourishment of the nerves.

The cause of most nervous troubles is some interference with this nourishment which can be supplied only through the blood. Whenever the blood becomes impure or weak, the nerves fail to receive their needed nourishment and sooner or later become exhausted and break down. If the blood is neglected some form of nervous trouble results.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the most direct cure for nervous troubles because they remove the cause of these diseases by building up and purifying the blood. The pure blood which they make furnishes the nerves with needed elements until they are restored to their normal strength. The pills have made many remarkable cures in nervous disorders that no sufferer can afford to neglect giving them a trial.

Mrs. Winona Smith, of No. 82 Winter street, Auburn, Me., gave this tonic treatment a thorough trial and her cure should encourage every nervous sufferer to give it a trial. She says:

"About seven years ago my right side and limb finally became paralyzed. My right eye was also affected. My tongue was thick and it bothered me to talk. I was awfully nervous and my people were afraid I was going to have St. Vitus' dance. I was very thin, had no color and could only sit up in a chair.

"I was sick for about a year and the doctor said I had partial paralysis. He gave me electric treatment but did not seem to help me. He gave me no encouragement. A friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and, as I was not being helped, I did so. At first I thought the pills were not helping me but in a few weeks I was able to get around without effort. I now work every day and am in good health."

If you are suffering from any nervous trouble, as neuralgia, sciatica, nervous headache, nervous dyspepsia, St. Vitus' dance, partial paralysis or locomotor ataxia, send today for our new booklet, "Diseases of the Nervous System."

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be sent by mail postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

WORLD'S TITLE NEW OBJECT OF GIRL SWIMMER

Sixteen-year-old Elsie Aykroyd, the East Boston girl who swam from Revere beach to Bass Point and back, a distance of over seven miles in the remarkable time of six hours and twenty-one minutes, says that swimming is an art which every man, woman, girl and boy should learn.

"It strengthens and invigorates all the muscles of the body. Every child should be taught to swim, not only for the exercise derived from it but as a means of self-protection," says Miss Aykroyd.

And she ought to know. This remarkable girl who has accomplished what no other woman swimmer has ever done before, a seven-mile swim without even a stop, first learned to swim when she was but four years old. At that age she could dive from her father's shoulder with the greatest of ease.

Although she had performed a number of remarkable feats in the water which for endurance and strength cannot be equalled by many men swimmers, Miss Aykroyd is not an extraordinarily strong girl. She is of moderate size, has beautiful golden hair and a well developed and shapely form.

She has won the first prize in almost every swimming contest which she has entered. She claims the girl's championship of Boston. Although her elder brother, Arthur, says that he beat her in a short race in Chelsea Creek, which is near their home, the girl maintains that she was only "joshing" him and let him win for the "fun of it."

Miss Aykroyd has adopted two or three strokes which she confines herself to in all her swimming. In a long swim she uses the under-hand Australian stroke, alternating from left to right about every mile. In a short-distance swim she uses the over-arm stroke.

Her only suggestions to girls who desire to learn to become good swimmers are:

Have confidence.

Adopt a stroke which you find easiest and most effective.

When beginning to learn how to swim use a breast stroke.

Miss Aykroyd is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Aykroyd of No. 1 Wordsworth street, East Boston. Her parents are proud of her achievements and will send her to England to participate in the contest which is to come off in the River Thames, where the international amateur championship will be decided. The distance will be seventeen miles. It will be the longest swim ever attempted by a girl.

TAKE POSLAM WITH YOU.

Sunburn, Red Noses, Rash and Summer Skin Troubles May Annoy During Vacation Days.

A jar of poslam at hand during the summer vacation means freedom from many annoying little affections, such as rash, sunburn, fever-blisters, bites, stings, burns, pimples, itching feet and scalp, etc., which are liable to affect one anywhere. In quickly disposing of these minor troubles, poslam, which has accomplished such remarkable work in the cure of eczema and like serious skin diseases, has become a veritable household remedy. There is no skin disorder for which it should not be unhesitatingly used and which it will not benefit. It is an active antiseptic and contains nothing which can possibly injure the most delicate skin. Acne, herpes, tetter, piles, scalp scales, barber's and all other forms of itch, including itching feet, etc., yield to it readily.

A special 50-cent package of poslam, convenient to carry when traveling, is prepared for minor uses, and this, as well as the regular $2 jar, is for sale by all druggists, including all Riker-Jaynes stores and Houghton & Dutton's Drug Dept.

A sample package of poslam will be mailed, free of charge, to any one upon request, by the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West 25th street, New York City.

KATE TANNATT WOODS, AUTHOR, WHO DIED TO-DAY

KATE TANNATT WOODS IS DEAD

SALEM, July 12.—A dispatch from Buffalo, N. Y., announces that Mrs. Kate Tannatt Woods of this city died at the home of her son, Dr. Prince T. Woods, in Buffalo, to-day. She had been ill for a long time.

She was born in Peekskill, N. Y., December 29, 1835, and was educated in Peekskill academy and by private tutors. She came to Salem when a young girl, and for a considerable time was a teacher in the public schools. While in her teens she wedded George Henry Woods, a lawyer, and a graduate of Harvard.

Her husband became a prominent officer in the union army during the Civil War and Mrs. Woods shared all of his dangers, as far as possible, caring for sick and wounded soldiers.

Mrs. Woods was a woman of varied talents, being widely known as an artist, author of numerous books and as a worker in the cause of women. BRIGANDS ROB BOSTON MOTOR PARTY IN ITALY

Cable dispatches relate the holdup by brigands near Florence, Italy, of two prominent Bostonians, Robert A. Bolt and his brother, Edward D. Bolt of Brookline, and their wives, while making an automobile tour of Italy.

The party was motoring through Hilage, near Florence, when they ran into a boulder, which had been placed on the road by the bandits, who immediately appeared on the scene and demanded money from the motorists. The men handed over $53 which was all they had in cash, but as this did not satisfy the brigands the brothers were held as hostages until their wives could make the trip to their villa and bring back $120 more which the bandits accepted. The party was then liberated with the warning that nothing be divulged to the police.

All four of the party are well known in Boston and Brookline society. Robert A. Bolt is the head of the firm of that name, insurance agents at No. 40 Kilby street, this city, and lives at No. 29 Colchester street, Brookline. His brother, Edward D. Bolt, is prominent in Boston society and art circles. His home is at No. 19 Colchester street, Brookline. Both men are Harvard men, and have lived in Boston all their lives.

The party left Boston June 17 for an automobile tour of the continent and expect to return some time late in the Fall.

POLICE SEEK MOVING PICTURE BURGLARS

The State police are working with the police of Hyde Park and Dedham to apprehend a band of thieves who are robbing moving picture houses of machines and valuable films, all of which are registered under the laws of Massachusetts. A machine owned by Daniel Field in a theatre at Hyde Park was stolen last Friday night, and one at the Star Theatre, East Dedham, the property of Louis Denmark, was taken Saturday. The machine and films at the Globe Theatre, Dedham, owned by Adolph Herbert, were found bundled up ready for transportation.

MARLBORO LEADERS ARE OUT FOR VAHEY

MARLBORO, July 12.—That former Senator James H. Vahey of Watertown will receive staunch support in his candidacy for Governor this Fall from Marlboro was evidenced to-day, when ex-Mayor F. B. Mildon, former secretary of the Marlboro Democratic City Committee, announced that he for one would support Mr. Vahey, and would not aid Congressman Foss unless Mr. Vahey distinctly refused to run for the nomination. Mayor John J. Shaughnessy also announced that his choice would be for Vahey right straight through. The Mayor expressed the opinion that matters would probably be fixed up before the State convention so that Foss would withdraw from the list of nominees.

MARLBORO DRUM CORPS ENLISTS WITH BOY SCOUTS

Well-Known Militia Officer Offers His Services as Drill Master to Organizations of Boys.

CADET DRUM CORPS OF MARLBORO

A feature of yesterday's applications for membership in the American Boy Scout movement was the large number of organizations which either made applications for membership or wrote to find out how they may join as a body.

The Cadet Drum Corps of Marlboro sent the following letter:

Marlboro, Mass.

The American Boy Scout,
New England Headquarters:

Enclosed find a picture of the Cadet Fife and Drum Corps of Marlboro. We are all interested in the Scouts and would like to join as a fife and drum corps. Our uniform consists of white caps, military khaki coats, white duck trousers and brown leggins. We range in age from fourteen to eighteen years, and have been formed over two years.

There are fourteen of us. Please send some kind of booklet, which explains about joining, etc. This picture was taken before we got our new coats. Hoping you will send particulars as soon as possible.

JACK CARPENTER
No. 30 Newton street, Marlboro.

The Corps was notified that it is welcome to the great Scout movement. These uniforms will do for the present. All organizations having uniforms may retain them until they are worn out, and then get the official Scout uniform. The only thing needed by the Marlboro Corps and organizations of a like character is the official scout badge, which will cost very little.

Many inquiries for this badge are received daily. tI is not ready yet for issue in quantities.

Militia Officer Offers Services.

The following letter from Sergeant William D. Treu, of No. 197 Pearl street, Providence, R. I., volunteering his services as drill-master, is one of several from army and national guard officers offering to aid in the great work of organizing. All such offers have been accepted and others are urged to volunteer.

Sergeant True's letter follows:

Providence, R. I., July 10.

Mr. G. H. Gorton,
Secretary New England Headquarters Boy Scouts, Boston.

Sir—I would like to be of assistance in organizing Boy Scouts in New England. I have just returned from England. I was so much interested, I got all possible data there.

I met Sir General Baden-Powell at review of the Boy Scouts in Liverpool. There were 15,000 boys in line.

I consider it one of the finest movements for boys possible. Please send me blanks and rules of your system and let me know to what extent I can use English work.

In regard to myself, I am an old military man and still a member of the National Guard. Here are my references: Hon. James B. Littlefield, Providence, R. I.; General F. M. Sackett, Adjutant General, R. I., and General Howard Walker, Quarter-master General.

I had hoped to be a pioneer in the American movement. The American Consul at Liverpool told me, however, that I was too late, that a big movement had been started in America with men like General Miles at its head.

Permit me to make particular mention of the courtesies extended to me by the United States Consulate at Liverpool, and the valuable help given to me by Vice-Consul George B. Stephenson.

SERGEANT WILLIAM D. TREU,
No. 197 Pearl street, Providence, R. I.

The American Boy Scout.

By MARCUS WOODWARD.

The Boy Scout idea is, above all, patriotic. It is non-political and non-sectarian, but it aims at making a boy self-reliant and manly.

Let it be supposed now that a boy aged ten, desires, with a great desire, to become a Boy Scout; and that there is no parental impediment why he should not join.

One night he is taken by a Scout friend to the Scout headquarters. This is an act that will stand to the credit of his friend; it will help forward his career as a Scout. The headquarters is a fine spacious room, once a parish hall, but now devoted, by the kindness of a squire, to the cause of Scoutcraft.

No dreary drilling-shed, this hall—it is more a cosy club. There are gymnastic appliances: a home-made vaulting-horse, a ball to punch, a bar to swing on, and a mat to fall on; there are boxing gloves and fencing foils; a table is covered with the literature of the Scouts—the handbook, "Scouting for Boys," the weekly paper, "The Scout," and pamphlets of divers sorts.

The new chum is made heartily welcome; forthwith his initiation begins. Certain things he must learn before he can be enrolled, and sworn in. He must know the Scout law, also the Scout salute. He must understand the composition of the National flag, and the right way to fly it. And he must be able to tie some of the many useful knots of which Scouts are masters. Being a bright boy, he acquires this amount of scoutcraft within a couple of hours of entering headquarters.

Boy Scout's Creed!

On Scout Law depends the whole force and the whole glory of the Boy Scout idea. Scout Law is a creed of honor and chivalry, a magnificent code, a true and trusty guide to life. Scout Law is the backbone of the whole system; it is more than that, it is the very soul of the movement.

Scouts all the world over have, and have ever had, unwritten laws, to bind them in honor, and guide them through all perils. The Japanese have their Bushido; the laws of the Samurai warriors, the Knights of our Romantic Ages had their chivalry, the Red Indians have their code of honor—in India, in Zululand, throughout the world, these codes of conduct exist, and all that is best in them has found its way into the Scout Law. As the Knights considered their honor the most sacred thing to uphold—so the Scouts. This is the Scout Law:—

A Scout's honor is to be trusted.
A Scout is loyal.
A Scout's duty is to be useful, and to help others.
A Scout is a friend to all, and a brother to every other Scout.
A Scout is courteous.
A Scout is a friend to animals.
A Scout obeys orders.
A Scout smiles and whistles.
A Scout is thrifty.

Scouts' Greatest Point.

Nine points—and the greatest of them all is, to help others. The reason why the Scout is different from other boys is because he thinks of others, because he is prepared, at any minute, to save life, to help injured persons, to help anyone. He is bound, by the Scout Law, "to try his best to do a good turn to somebody every day." People may mock at this, sneer at it, if they please; but the simple fact remains that Scouts do perform kind deeds daily.

Many stories could be told on that head. One troop has published a little book of the kindly daily deeds done by the different Scouts, and wonderfully interesting reading it is.

There is nothing ostentatious about these good turns; many of them are humdrum acts, like chopping firewood daily for a poor neighbor, or rising a little earlier than usual to help mother. Any boy could do them: the point is that Scouts are trained to think of doing them—and do them.

CAVALIERI'S HAIR

She Keeps It Beautiful by Frequent Washing

Mme Lina Cavalieri, the grand opera soprano, whom some people call the most famous beauty in the world, had a long article in the New York Sunday American January 17, 1909, in which she says: "With a lifeless condition of the hair I have always found two corresponding conditions of the scalp. The scalp is hot and dry. Also, the brushing reveals dandruff—light, fine and profuse. It is a condition that must be corrected. First to remove the dandruff, for the dandruff must be removed. Hair cannot thrive when that fine, light powder lies upon the scalp, obstructing its pores. To rid one's self of it, the hair must be washed, not once, but often. I resolve upon washing it every day for a week." Here Cavalieri shows she has learned what most women never learn. She washes her hair and scalp often, while women generally do not do so more than once a month. There is just one way to have beautiful hair, and that is to have a healthy scalp, and there is just one way to have a healthy scalp, and that is to keep it clean, soft and supple. Common soaps and shampoos won't do, because they contain too much alkali, and make the hair harsh and dry, and the scalp hot and scaly. Tonics and renewers and invigorators won't do either, because they do not cleanse. Birt's Head Wash, the popular new scientific preparation, is the best thing in the world for cleansing the hair and scalp. Tubes 25c, jars 50c.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., July 12.—A wind storm that passed over southern Indiana caused many thousands of dollars damage. In Evansville several buildings were unroofed. The top of the building of the Bement Seltz wholesale grocery company was torn away and rain damaged the stock $25,000.

CLERK'S THEFTS HALF MILLION

LOUISVILLE, July 12.—August Ropke, assistant secretary of the Fidelity Trust Company, one of the oldest and most substantial banking houses in Louisville, is under arrest on the charge of embezzlement.

It is believed that when experts, who are at work on the books, make their report the shortage will be found to amount to nearly $500,000.

The speculations of Ropke were carried on in Louisville, Chicago and in the local bucket shops. Officials of the bank state that they must have been going on for at least five years. Ropke refuses to deny or affirm the charges against him.

MELROSE ELKS HAVE A NIGHT ON WATER

Melrose Elks gave a stag party on the Satellite last night. Many Elks from Boston and other lodges were members of the party which sailed from Central Wharf shortly after 7 o'clock, cruising down the harbor and circling Boston lightship. The boat returned by 11 o'clock, the Melrose folk returning home in a special car on the Boston & Maine. Joseph N. Shafer was in entire charge of the affair. Gookin's orchestra furnished music aboard the Satellite. An attractive program of amusements was arranged and refreshments including fish chowder and sandwiches were served when the party was far out at sea. The night was perfect and the first outing of the year of the Melrose Elks was completely successful.

THOMAS F. WALSH'S WIDOW IS VERY ILL

BAR HARBOR, Maine, July 12.—Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, widow of the Colorado silver king, is seriously ill at "The Briars," the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean. Mrs. Walsh came here with her daughter and husband and their baby five weeks ago, coming directly from Washington and has not left the house since arriving. Ever since the death of her husband Mrs. Walsh has been depressed and grieves continually.

MOTHS APPEAR BY THE MILLION; RASH DUE NEXT

The annual visitation of the brown tail moth has begun, and Boston is to-day playing hostess to millions of the troublesome insects. Trees, arc lights and the sides of buildings and fences, not only in the suburbs, but also in the business section of the city, are literally plastered with the pests. Clustered together by thousands, their white wings appeared like a blanket of snow when daylight revealed them.

It is believed the swarms came down on the wind from New Hampshire, where they have caused much damage of late. An epidemic of moth rash, caused by the almost imperceptible fuzz which blows from the moths, is almost certain to prevail within a few days. The fuzz is poisonous and highly irritating to whatever part of the body it touches. The greatest sufferers are those whose underwear is dried on clotheslines.

The trees on the Common are laden with the insects, and the poles and arc lights throughout the city are covered.

In Malden, Everett and Stoneham and several other towns outside the city limits, also in Jamaica Plain, Roxbury and Charlestown, the air is filled with fluttering moths. The appearance of so many of the insects has caused much alarm among the residents of infected suburban towns, who fear the pest cannot be exterminated. In some of the down-town hotels the moths sailed in through the windows and became so troublesome to the guests that bellboys armed with brooms were sent through the buildings to check the invasion.

The members of the State Park Commission are at their wits end trying to devise some method to successfully cope with the large number of moths, which are rapidly increasing. A heavy downpour of rain will kill them quickly, and the commission sincerely hopes it will come to-day.

One thousand aspatus flies and 200 Calosoma beetles have been set at liberty in Dedham to feed upon gypsy moths. These insects have been carefully raised at the laboratory at Melrose Heights for just this purpose. Both of the insects are deadly enemies of the gypsy moth, upon which they feed. Their first day's lunch, it is expected, will consist of 15,000 moths. A similar number of flies and beetles were released in West Wood. Others will also be set at liberty in other of the suburbs to-day.

SIEGEL CHIEFS HAD GAY OUTING PARTY

Down at Nantasket to-day they are still talking about the dandy time that the crowd from Siegel's had at their outing last Saturday afternoon. Up at Siegel's department store those who went on the outing—well, they are still talking, too. Anyway, the employes of four departments were mighty loth to leave when it came time to take the 9:40 boat home Saturday night. Those who went on the outing were the guests of Miss S. A. Wallace, drug buyer; William J. Schwarz, buyer of books and stationery; R. Perry, candy buyer, and H. M. Hollander, buyer of china and house furnishings. The entire afternoon was spent at the resort. Dinner was served at the Palm Garden, and after a dip in the ocean the crowd visited Paragon Park.

EXTREME HOT SPELL COMING BACK ON FRIDAY

Greater Boston is in for two days of cooler weather. Then, say the weather sharps in the postoffice tower, the sizzling heat is to return with power to torment humanity unabated, and the suffering that the inhabitants of this section have experienced of late is to be resumed.

Friday is the day that the prophets set for the reappearance of the hot weather. From now up to that time conditions are to be made very bearable by showers. The rain is due to reach Boston to-night or tomorrow.

It will be the west winds, superceding the breeze from the east that will allow the sun's rays full vent again.

5 Deaths, 50 Prostrations.

The thermometer at 10 o'clock this morning registered 82. Yesterday at the same hour it was several degrees higher. One year ago to-day the mercury hovered around 64. The hottest July 12 on record in the weather bureau was two years ago, when 97 was recorded in this city. The coldest corresponding day was in 1888, when 56 degrees was registered.

One death, due to the heat, was reported in Boston yesterday. Mrs. Emma Franklin, forty-three, of No. 86 Pembroke street, South End, who was found dead in her room. During the past six days there were five deaths and fifty prostrations in Boston.

Seven persons received treatment at the City Hospital yesterday, eleven were cared for at the Relief Hospital and one heat sufferer was cared for at Grace Hospital. In several instances injuries of a serious nature resulted from falls received when the prostration occurred.

Hospitals Kept Busy.

The police and hospital ambulances were kept on the run throughout the day, and many persons, whose condition was such as to not require hospital attention, were removed to their homes by friends.

Despite the records that the day brought forth, it was much more comfortable than Sunday, and the cool wave, predicted by Forecaster Smith was in evidence during the night hours. The low percentage of humidity also tended to make the atmosphere less oppressive.

Thousands sought relief on the Common in the public parks and at the beaches and the excursion boats going down the harbor were thronged.

One of the most pathetic cases reaching the notice of the police was that of Guiseppi Augustina, ninety-six years old, of Melrose, who was found faint and exhausted on a bench in the Copp's Hill Park at an early hour today. He could not give the police the name of the street where he resided and was sent to the Chardon Street Home.

YOUTH WHO SHOT A POLICEMAN HELD

John C. Leahy, a South Boston youth, who shot Patrolman Loring in the attic of an old house on Factory Hill at Braintree Saturday night, was arraigned to-day in the Quincy Police Court before Judge Avery. Leahy was charged with assault with intent to murder and accessory before the fact in breaking and entering. On the first charge he was held in $10,000 and in $1,000 on the second. Leahy was suspected of breaking into the house of Frederick R. Smith of Braintree. Loring followed him and finally tracked him to the house of Leahy's cousin in Braintree.

BOSTON ASSESSORS BEST, SAYS MAYOR.

At the present time Boston has a better assessing department than any city in the country. The Boston assessors come nearer getting 100 cents on the dollar than any assessing board in this Commonwealth. In Lawrence, Lynn and Worcester, for instance, values range as low as 50 per cent.; in some cities they do not average more than 70. It is very evident that the average assessing board does not do its work properly; this is true in practically all the State's cities with the exception of Cambridge and one or two other cities near Boston.—Mayor Fitzgerald in discussing rejection of A. A. Badaracco by Civil Service Board.

COURT REFUSES LEARY WARRANT

Judge Bragg of the Charlestown Municipal Court to-day refused to grant an application for a warrant, charging manslaughter against Patrolman Dennis Leary of the City Square Station, who, in a clash with a number of young men Sunday evening, fatally wounded William Deegan of Somerville and inflicted bullet wounds on three others.

The application for the warrant was made by Captain George D. Yeaton of the City Square Station, who appeared in court under instructions received from his superiors in the police department.

Judge Bragg heard the testimony of John J. Anderson of No. 140 Linwood street, Somerville, who received a bullet in the right foot from Leary's revolver, and Albert Johnson, a negro, of No. 555 Shawmut avenue, held with Anderson on charges of attempting to rescue a prisoner.

Chief Inspector Dugan also presented the testimony of five witnesses, as taken by a stenographer. Judge Bragg then stated that unless Captain Yeaton had evidence other than what had been presented, he would have to refuse the application. He said that so far as he could see the officer was justified in what he did.

MRS. A. G. VANDERBILT HOME FROM EUROPE

NEW YORK, July 12.—Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, divorced wife of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, returned to-day, on the Kron Prinzessin Cecilie after a stay abroad of a little over a month. It has been rumored ever since Mrs. Vanderbilt was divorced last September that she was going to marry Willing Spencer, son of J. Thompson Spencer, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad system. When she went abroad last Fall he followed her, and it is said met her in Paris. Other passengers on the Cecilie were John W. Gates and his son, Charles G. Gates; William E. Corey, Mortimer L. Schiff, A. V. Armour, Cecile A. Grenfell, M. P.; the Baroness von Wiedersperg, Martin Beck and Raymond C. Brown of the United States immigration service at Honolulu.

SUNDAY AMERICAN Want Ads. bring Monday morning returns.

WAR ON FIGHT PICTURES WON, INSISTS SHAW

From the outlook to-day there will be no Jeffries-Johnson moving pictures exhibited in this State. Every Mayor in the Commonwealth has come out strongly against them with the exception of Mayors Clifford of Brockton and Rich of Lynn. Both these executives are non-committal.

Secretary Shaw of the Christian Endeavor Society declared to-day that he had received hundreds of letters from leading citizens of the State, also from Sunday schools and other religious bodies, all of whom are against the fight pictures. "The victory is won in Massachusetts," declared the secretary, "as well as in other States."

It is the belief of the officials at the Christian Endeavor headquarters that an attempt will be made to place the pictures in a number of theatres in the outside cities and towns. They declare if they are run one evening that the theatre managers will lose their licenses.

Pastor Refuses to Protest.

The Rev. Samuel J. Comfort, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Shawmut avenue and Waltham street, has announced that he would not ask his church to unite in the protest against the exhibition of the pictures of the big prize fight.

Mr. Comfort says that in many sections of the country its citizens have been shot, burned at the stake and otherwise inhumanly treated, but that he never heard of any widespread action against such conditions. He says he does not know how to differentiate between the brutality of lynching and that of prize fights, nor is he a supporter of prize fights, which he bitterly opposes.

The picture film crusade is but one week old, yet cities, states and countries, with a combined population of 25,000,000, have put the ban on the pictures and the movement is rapidly spreading. Secretary Shaw says it has now assumed world-wide proportions and is far from reaching the end.

Missouri Wages Fight.

Governor H. S. Hadley of Missouri writes Secretary Shaw that he will make every possible effort to keep the fight pictures out of Missouri and will urge in the next Legislature the passing of a bill to prohibit fight pictures and any other motion pictures which might be considered objectionable.

The Christian Endeavorers in Boston have retained former Governor Bates as counsel.

A London cable says the British government has no power to prevent the exhibition of pictures of the fight, according to a statement which Winston Churchill, the Secretary of State for Home Affairs, made in the House of Commons in reply to a question. There seems to be little disposition in England to exhibit the pictures.

There is slight probability that the fight pictures will be censored by the National Board of Censorship, according to advices from New York.

POSTAL CLERK HELD IN $500.

Nicholas D. Scully waived examination before United States Commissioner Hayes to-day on the charge of embezzling money at the Fenway postoffice, where he was employed as a clerk, and was held in $500 for the Grand Jury.

U. S. DEMANDS ON ITALY MAY FREE CHARLTON

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Porter Charlton, who is under arrest at Hoboken, N. J., charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Mary Scott Castle Charlton, at Lake Como, Italy, will not be surrendered in response to the request made by the Italian Government for his extradition to Italy for trial.

The present intention of the officers of the State Department is to decline to surrender him. This means that Charlton will go free, as there is no court in this country with jurisdiction to try him.

A deadlock exists between the State Department and the Italian Foreign Office over the question of Charlton's extradition. The Italian Government has asked his surrender, and the official warrant and other extradition papers are now on their way to the department.

Secretary of State Knox it is said is willing to surrender Charlton, but only on condition that the Italian Government agree to surrender in future Italians who commit crimes in this country and take refuge in their native land.

The Italian Government is forbidden by its penal code from extraditing its own subjects to foreign countries. In view of this deadlock according to present intentions, the request from Italy for Charlton's surender will be denied.

ACTRESS' SISTER, WHO IS BRIDE OF NAVAL OFFICER

EILEEN ANGLIN A NAVY BRIDE

NEW YORK, July 12.—Miss Eileen Mary Warren Anglin, sister of Miss Margaret Anglin, the actress, was married to Lieutenant Charles Thomas Hutchins, Jr., U. S. N., yesterday in the Lady Chapel of St. Patrick's Cathedral. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Gleason, chaplain of the Atlantic fleet, in the presence of relatives and intimate friends.

The bride, who is a daughter of the late Timothy Warren Anglin of Ottawa, Canada, was given away by her brother, Arthur Anglin. She was unattended and wore a street costume of white embroidered linen with a hat to correspond. Lieutenant Hutchins is a son of Rear Admiral Charles Thomas Hutchins, retired.

After the ceremony the young couple left for a motor trip in the new automobile which the bride's sister, Margaret Anglin, presented to her as a wedding gift.

The young naval officer met his bride while he was on a cruise around the world with the Atlantic fleet. Miss Anglin's sister was playing in "The Thief," at Melbourne, when the battleships reached Sydney, and at a luncheon which the officers of the Louisiana, on which Lieutenant Hutchins was stationed, gave in honor of the actress, it happened that yesterday's bride sat next to Lieutenant Hutchins.

600 BUSINESS MEN ON TOUR OF THE HARBOR

Six hundred members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce toured Boston Harbor to-day to study present improvements and conditions, improvements which are now under way, and above all to find out how the harbor and Boston's marine facilities for extending its trade may be made still better.

Boarding the steamboat South Shore at Rowe's Wharf at 2 o'clock the members of the Chamber devoted three solid hours to earnest inspection of the city's water front, and studied how they might urge improvements in it.

The new great docks built and in course of erection, the removal of the fish industry from old "T" Wharf, the transferring of the immigration offices and detention rooms, the dredging and enlarging of the ship channels, and, above all, the alterations which the proposed new harbor lines would make, were all the objects of closest attention on the part of the members of the party.

The new harbor line was the special feature to which attention was called today. The drawing of this line from Jeffries point to Apple Island puts the Commonwealth in possession of a vast expanse of flats upon which great docks may be built and upon which the greater development of Boston will depend.

Development Plan Explained.

The Harbor and Land Commission received from the last Legislature $3,000,000 for developments of the East Boston waterfront and the plans of the commission were to be explained in detail on the ground.

The great Commonwealth dock, which for fifteen years has lain unused at South Boston, although it is the largest and finest on the Atlantic coast, has at last found a tenant and the business men were shown how the State will spend a million in the erection of sheds and freight houses—as well as other improvements for their new tenants, the present occupants of T wharf, who will build a greater T wharf in South Boston.

Dinner at Nantasket.

Then after the entire waterfront was explored the steamer turned her nose to Nantasket and after dinner in the palm room at Paragon Park, famous speakers drove home the lessons learned during the tour.

The points visited during the tour included navy yard, the channels, the Boston & Maine bridges, the East Boston waterfront, the new Cunard pier, Dorchester Bay, the forts, President Roads, Broad Sound, the new channel, the Graves, the bay, the old ship channel, Boston Light, Nix's Mate, etc.

President Bernard J. Rothwell was on hand to greet his guests, as were James J. Storrow, John Candler Cobb, Frederick P. Fish, Daniel D. Morse, James A. McKibben and the members of the various committees.

The guests were Henry Cabot Lodge, Congressmen O'Connell, Keliher and Ernest W. Roberts, Lieutenant T. T. Hunter Harwood, Eben S. Draper, George E. Smith, chairman of the Harbor and Land Commission, Herman A. Harding, S. M. Mansfield, John F. Fitzgerald, Charles Bruce, W. E. McLintock of Cleveland and Admiral Francis T. Bowles.

GOULD GIRLS UNDER GUARD WITH MOTHER

NEW YORK, July 12.—Followed by a detective in the employ of Frank J. Gould, Ralph Hill Thomas and his bride, who until yesterday was Gould's divorced wife, Mrs. Helen Kelley Gould sailed for Europe to-day aboard the Kaiser Wilhelm. The detective will shadow the Thomases during their honeymoon through England and Scotland. The reason for his surveillance is the decree of the court which granted Mrs. Gould her divorce concerning the custody of the Gould children, little Helen Margaret and Dorothy. The court ordered that the children should not be taken more than 100 miles from New York by either parent without the consent of the other.

The children attended the wedding of their mother yesterday and were closely watched by nine detectives in the employ of the father. The object of the detectives was to prevent the children being taken to Europe.

Bride Is Indignant.

Mrs. Thomas was bitterly indignant over the seizure of the children. "There was no excuse for all of this," she said, just before sailing. "I cannot understand the actions these people have been guilty of. They have followed us everywher. It is all Helen Gould's work. She has been watching me and my children for a week. They have had detectives follow us to our home at Sands Point here. The children were turned over to Miss Gould last evening. It is shameful.

"Miss Gould is to take care of the children until Mr. Thomas and I return from Europe in two months. I shall then have them at Sands Point."

"Has Miss Helen Gould asked you to allow her to adopt the children?"

"You can say she has, but I have always refused to listen to any such thing. No one can have my children but myself. Frank Gould, by remarrying, has forfeited all claim to the children. Miss Helen Gould can guarantee them a good home, but I can give them as good a home as any one, and I intend having them."

Thomas Honeymoon Plans.

When the Thomases and the Gould children sailed to-day one of Frank Gould's detectives said: "I have been instructed to follow Mrs. Gould to Europe if necessary, in order to watch over the Gould children and keep track of them."

From friends of the Thomases it was learned that their intention is to leave the steamer at Plymouth, hurrying on to London and there beginning a motor car trip through England and Scotland in Mr. Thomas's car. Their return, according to the authority, will not be made till next Spring. Then a magnificent house will be built on the Sands Point estate.

The couple were married by Rev. Dr. Webster, pastor of the Brook Presbyterian Church. The horde of private detectives Church. The horde of private detectives husband of the bride, swarmed in and out of the main hallway of the apartment house to prevent, they declared, any possible attempt to spirit away the Gould children.

The two little girls, Helen and Dorothy Gould were followed back and forth from the hotel, where they are staying by several of the detectives in a taxicab.

JACK JOHNSON SAYS PUNCH IN THE EYE WON WORLD BATTLE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

EXPECT RECORDS MAY BE BROKEN TO-DAY AT MEET OF MARKSMEN

CON O'KELLY PICKED BY TOMMY RYAN AS SURE TO BEAT JACK JOHNSON

Con O'Kelly, the fresh-faced young Irishman who came to this country about a year ago hoping to earn fame as a wrestler, is the latest heavyweight to determine that Jack Johnson is his mutton.

O'Kelly is backed up in this idea by Tommy Ryan, the man who made Jeffries, the man who taught Jeffries how to fight, brought home to him the peculiar advantage of the crouch and in other ways made Jeffries the greatest fighter the world ever knew until he retired and deteriorated.

Ryan has taken O'Kelly in charge and declares that the young Irishman is a great fighter, that in two years he will be as good as any heavyweight boxer in the world and able to give even Champion Johnson a run for the title.

Only once was O'Kelly seen in public in this country. That was the time he met Pat Connolly in a wrestling match in New York, which was stopped after about three-quarters of an hour's work by the police on the ground that there was nothing resembling wrestling shown by either man, but that the contest was a rough and tumble fight pure and simple. O'Kelly, who was said to be the holder of two amateur wrestling championships on the other side of the pond, gave Connolly a great fight. He shot home left jabs and crossed his right many times. Connolly was about as bad as O'Kelly, seemingly being more willing to fight than wrestle. In this bout O'Kelly showed that he had little idea of the mat game, but that he was game and willing to fight any one.

Ryan Takes Charge.

Now Tommy Ryan has taken up the young man, and he is positive in saying that O'Kelly will make a great fighter.

A big broth of an Irish boy is O'Kelly. He comes from Cork, is strong of limb, stout of heart and seems to have the inborn love of an Irishman for a shindy.

Up to the Pastime Gym in Syracuse, North Side, Ryan and O'Kelly go at it hammer and tongs every afternoon. Three months only has the Celt been taking boxing lessons from Ryan, and in that time he has learned more about the fight game than the average fighter could learn in a lifetime.

Ryan is stuck on his big fellow. At that he will not talk a great deal of O'Kelly. When asked what he really thought O'Kelly's chances were of ever developing into a great fighter, the former middleweight champion said:

"This big guy is awful good. Don't say that I said he will beat Johnson. Don't say that I said much about him at all. I just want him to develop naturally, fight his way up there, and when the proper time comes put him against the fellow who then holds the belt. But, on the level, the big 'harp' gets better every day. I saw Jeffries come up from a no account to the best scrapper in the world, but Jeff never showed anything like this fellow has got.

Has It on Jeffries.

"I tell you, and I know, in gameness, speed and strength this young fellow promises to have it on Jeffries, and his chances of fighting to the top are 100 per cent. better than I thought Jeffries's chances were when I started to train the Californian. You know why? He's a smart fellow. He wants to learn, and he tries to learn, and being just naturally bright, he picks things up easily. You can make fighters—all kinds of them—but if they're blockheads you can't shape their heads for them. This fellow has the head.

"I don't want to predict anything, because if I go wrong a lot of fellows who like to knock will say that I drew a lemon, and all the hammers will start going. But I want to tell you that unless something I can't now see interferes, this championship belt is going to change hands some time in the near future, and my big fellow is going to be around when they pass out the transfer tickets."

O'Kelly is only twenty-three years old. He stands six feet four and one-half inches in his stocking feet and is as straight as a string. He weighs 225 pounds in fighting togs and trains not to take on weight, but to acquire muscle and to distribute his avoirdupois in the proper proportions about his big frame. This is Ryan's idea of how he should train. Tommy says O'Kelly will never enter the ring at less than 225 pounds. He says Con's frame is so big he needs this weight.

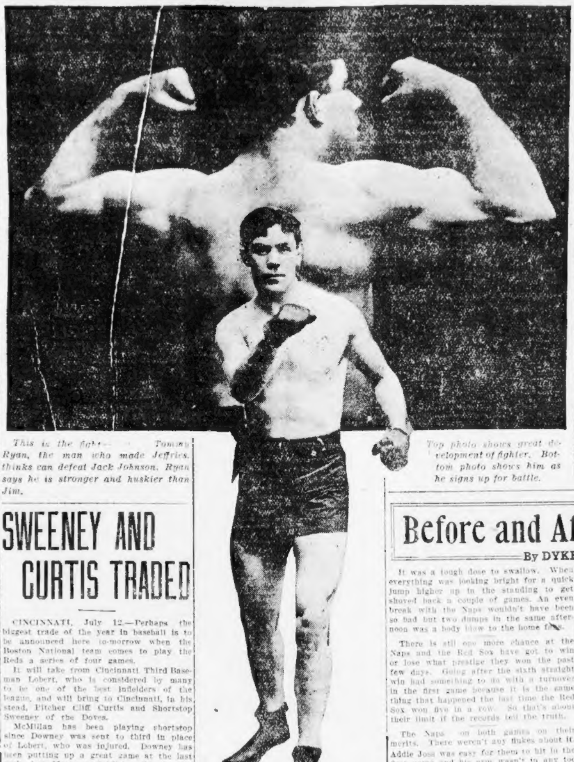
Built on fighting lines is this giant of a Celt. He would look a perfect figure but for the size of his neck. He measures nineteen and one-half inches around his neck, and this part of his anatomy is so thick and full that it is out of proportion to the rest of his body. Ryan has told him, however, that while his neck detracts from his physical charm, it is an asset for him as a fighter.

Has Greater Reach.

The Corkonian's reach is greater than that of any man who ever entered the ring. With arms extended he measures seventy-eight inches from finger tip to finger tip. His chest measures forty-four inches, with a four and one-half-inch expansion. His waist is thirty-five inches, his thigh twenty-five inches and his calf sixteen inches.

This powerfully built man keeps himself in perfect physical condition by careful living. With his natural physical advantages, his mode of living, and with one of the greatest ring masters who ever fought to guide him, there appears every chance of Ryan's prediction coming true. O'Kelly himself is in a hurry to get at Johnson. He probably would fight him now, but Ryan says no, and, like the dutiful student he is, O'Kelly has left all his future destinies in the hands of his master.

Irish Giant Who Is Out to Beat Johnson



This is the fight[illegible] Tommy Ryan, the man who made Jeffries, thinks can defeat Jack Johnson. Ryan says he is stronger and huskier than Jim.

Top photo shows great development of fighter. Bottom photo shows him as he signs up for battle.

JOHNSON SAYS PUNCH IN RIGHT EYE LICKED JEFF

NEW YORK, July 12.—Jack Johnson, conqueror of James J. Jeffries in the championship battle at Reno on July 4, to-day declared that it was the blow which closed Jeff's right eye that practically ended the big boilermaker's pugilistic career.

Johnson was given a great reception on his arrival here, over 6,000 negroes turning out to welcome him. The gigantic negro was buffeted about by a mob of his admirers, until he begged for a respite.

When asked why he sold his interests in the moving pictures, Johnson showed his gold teeth in a broad smile and said: "Well, it was like this. You always see the man who has the patent loses his money. Mr. Edison lets somebody else exploit his inventions. Now, if I had kept my interest in the moving pictures I would have had to employ a large number of men to look after my interest. As it was I got $50,000 and a little bonus of $10,000 or $12,000 more for my interest.

Now had I kept my share of the pictures by the time that the twenty-five or thirty of us had got through cheating one another, there would not have been that much money left for me. So as long as they were willing to manage it and give me the money, I was perfectly satisfied to take the $50,000 and the bonus. So far as I am concerned, I hope they make a million dollars out of it."

"In what round do you believe that you won that fight, or what blow do you think won it for you?" he was asked.

"Well, it was like this," said the dusky champion. "I think it was the blow that closed Jeff's left eye. You see, I led and drew him out, and then he thought that I would come back with my right, but I crossed over and uppercut with my left."

Continuing, Johnson said that he thought that blow was the one that especially surprized Jeffries and that it had been really the decisive blow of the fight.

"I am ready," said the champion, "to meet all comers and to defend the right I have unquestionably earned to the title."

GOTCH HAS CHANCE TO FIGHT IF HE REALLY WANTS TO

CHICAGO, July 12.—If Frank Gotch, world's champion wrestler, really is sincere in his desire to fight somebody, here is his chance. Charley Cutler, fellow wrestler and former fighter, is anxious to enter into a series of elimination contests, the best man in the bunch to battle Jack Johnson for the title. But, first of all, Cutler desires to fight Gotch, and whether the wrestling champion is really there or not, Cutler has mapped out a comprehensive program and wants the public to know all about it.

Cutler knows all about Jack Johnson. He was his sparring partner once, and while he frankly admits that the negro has it on him in skill, cleverness and speed, he believes his own strength and gameness might carry the day.

According to Cutler's story, he fought Johnson once in Reading, Pa., when Sam Fitzpatrick was manager of the black man. The posts of the ring protruded into the fighting space and in the very first round Johnson drove the back of Cutler's head into one of them, opening up a deep gash. Cutler says he was not hurt in the least, but he bled so freely that the referee stopped the contest.

"Never mind," Charley," said Sam Fitzpatrick, "the papers won't get hold of it and it won't affect your record."

Yet the next day the New York papers had stories by Fitz to the effect that Johnson was developing a terrific punch, having knocked Cutler out in one round.

MOVE MADE TO ARREST SULLIVAN FOR HOLDING STAKE

NEW YORK, July 12.—The crusade against the Jeff-Johnson fight pictures and prize fighting in general took on a new and startling phase to-day when it became known that efforts were being made to show that State Senator Sullivan violated the penal laws of this State when he consented to act as stakeholder and accepted part of the purse for the recent battle.

Assistant District Attorney Nott said, when the matter was broached to him, that an inquiry as to the real facts were to begin at once. "The district attorney's office will take immediate action on any evidence tending to show that the laws regarding prize fighting have been broken," he declared.

Unless the Red Sox come to the mark prepared to slam the Naps in the last game of the series this afternoon the crowd led by Jim McGuire will split even, as the games stand three to two now in favor of the Speed Boys, and they look good to give the Cleveland boys a final licking ere they depart not to return for a long period. The White Sox are coming to-morrow.

Losing the double-header yesterday caused much gloom in the ranks of the fans, but there is no great damage done. Both battles were the tightest kind of propositions and the result was always in doubt till the last man was out, and there wasn't anything of the one-sided nature about them.

The Naps put in all the best efforts to land, as they had been the underdog in the past three encounters, and it's too good a team to make a clean-up on. From every angle the Naps appear to be in the hunt as much as the Detroit Tigers and may yet make trouble for the league champions before the season is completed.

After making it so warm for the Naps that they didn't know whether they were going to win or not the Red Sox will get going the right way in the farewell visit and won't let anything get away from them.

No team can let the Naps get a good start and hope to beat them without showing superiority in every department, for they are dangerous with men like Lajoie, Turner and Easterly ready to slam the ball for keeps, no matter who is pitching against them.

The setback is only temporary for the Red Sox, but they can't stand many bumps and hope to hold on to that third place, with the Tigers refusing to lose their grip on the first division.

The Doves have started out on the road with lots of red fire, taking two out of three from Bresnahan's Cardinals. The two teams finish up to-day and the Cards will have to win in order to draw even with Lake's hustlers. The news of the deal whereby Sweeney and Curtis will be traded for Hans Lobert, the star third sacker, will be well received by local fans, who figure that a batter of the Lobert type will prove a valuable acquisition.

BIG BIKE CARD FOR REVERE SATURDAY

Elmer Collins of Lynn, George Willey of Buffalo and Eddie Root of Melrose, meeting in a twenty-five-mile motor paced championship race at the Revere Cycle track next Saturday night, is one of the strongest bicycle attractions offered by the Revere management this season. There will also be a ten-mile open and a one-half mile professional race, while the Class B riders will have a mile race and a five-mile open event.

SWEENEY AND CURTIS TRADED

CINCINNATI, July 12.—Perhaps the biggest trade of the year in baseball is to be announced here to-morrow when the Boston National team comes to play the Reds a series of four games.

It will take from Cincinnati Third Baseman Lobert, who is considered by many to be one of the best infielders of the league, and will bring to Cincinnati, in his stead, Pitcher Cliff Curtis and Shortstop Sweeney of the Doves.

McMillan has been playing shortstop since Downey was sent to third in place of Lobert, who was injured. Downey has been putting up a great game at the last sack, but Manager Griffith will probably use Sweeney at short, inasmuch as he is a better man than McMillan.

This plan has received the official recommendation of President Hermann, who is now at Detroit.

HERMANN PICKS TIGERS FOR PENNANT

DETROIT, Mich., July 12.—Garry Herrmann picks the Tigers and Cubs as the pennant winners this year. "Count on the finishing powers of the Tigers to get them up in front again," said Garry. "Detroit is doing as well as can be expected at this stage of the game. In the National League I think the Cubs will win the flag this year. Chance's team looks best to me. The Giants may be contenders, but Pittsburg is almost an outsider."

Before and After the Game

By DYKE CLARK.

It was a tough dose to swallow. When everything was looking bright for a quick jump higher up in the standing to get shoved back a couple of games. An even break with the Naps wouldn't have been so bad but two dumps in the same afternoon was a body blow to the home fans.

There is still one more chance at the Naps and the Red Sox have got to win or lose what prestige they won the past few days. Going after the sixth straight win had something to do with a turnover in the first game because it is the same thing that happened the last time the Red Sox won five in a row. So that's about their limit if the records tell the truth.

The Naps on both games on their merits. There weren't any flukes about it. Addie Joss was easy for them to hit in the first game and his arm wasn't in any too good shape for such work as he had cut out for him. All that was necessary to win for the Red Sox was the missing bingle with a runner at the third corner on two occasions with only one gone, but it never came. To help the Naps along a few miserable errors were thrown in, so it was plainly evident the Speed Boys were not up to their top game by any means.

Jim McGuire sprung one of his new ones in the second game, sending "Speck" Harkness to the rubber. He comes from the coast and has been held up during the early season by a bad arm and just lately has begun to work with excellent results. He certainly had the measure of the Red Sox, who could only connect for five safe ones and the one tally the home team got was due to a bad throw to second on a steal of second with a man on third.

President Taylor took decisive action after the second game when he suspended Pitcher Arellanes without pay, as he didn't consider the player was in proper condition, which came out in his playing. The Mexican has been the doubtful spot in the pitching department and waivers had been asked without any response from the other clubs, which made him more like a gold-brick in the Red Sox establishment.

Cris Mahoney, the star Fordham college boy, warmed up before the second game and conveyed the impression that he would take a chance at the Naps, as he looked pretty good. It is possible he may be given an opportunity to-day before the Naps depart. An expert who has looked the college material over pretty well, says that Mahoney is the best one he came across outside of Templeton, the Williams crack, and says the sooner the Red Sox started to use him the better off they would be.

The need of the double umpire system was never better seen than in the deal Tris Speaker got when he stole second and Lajoie made a bluff to stab him with the ball and never came within several feet of it. To Evans behind the plate it looked like an out, but not so to those to one side, who had a clear view.

At last Lajoie has shown some signs of life with the stick. He got three hits in the two games, two of them doubles with the right sound to 'em. And the worst of it was that both of those two sackers scored runs which won the first game. Still what is the good of a star man unless he figures in every game or nearly at that rate. Look at Tris Speaker for instance. He collected four hits and a possible fifth on a ball that Niles had hard work to reach and he had it all over over Lajoie in the batting average.

MATRON STAKE TO BE RUN AT EMPIRE CITY

Senator Joseph W. Bailey, president of the American Association of Trotting Horse Breeders, has notified the New York Trotting Horse Breeders' Club that the race for the $15,000 Matron Stake will take place at the Grand Circuit meeting at the Empire City Track, Yonkers, in the week beginning August 23. The Matron is the first of the big futurities arranged by the breeders' organization, of which Senator Bailey is the head, and the race will bring together practically all the fast three-year-olds in training.

Native Belle, the sensational filly that set the trotting record for two-year-olds at 2:07¾ last season, in winning the Kentucky Futurity, is among the fast ones engaged. Eva Bellini, Colorado E., Eva Tanguay and several other colts and fillies that could beat 2:10 last year are among the fast ones eligible to both races, and a battle royal is expected when they come together.

SOUTH BEND MANAGER AFTER THREE BOXMEN

PITTSBURG, July 12.—Bert Annis, manager of the South Bend team of the Central League, had a lengthy conference with President Fogel of the Philadelphia club. According to Fogel, Annis wants three of the Philadelphia pitchers. Fogel, while he would not name the pitchers, said he had set a price, and that Annis as an inducement offered to include his shortstop, McCarthy, in any trade that might be made.

Annis left for South Bend to lay the matter of price before the owners of the team.

BOSTON TYPOS WIN.

The Boston Typos won their sixth consecutive game by one run yesterday, at the Locust street grounds, by defeating the Savin Hill Stars, 6 to 5.

BIG RIFLE MEET IN FULL SWING.

WAKEFIELD, July 12.—Today is a big day at the sixteenth annual tournament of the New England Military Rifle Association at the Bay State range. Records promise to be broken, as the large number of riflemen present include crack shots from Massachusetts and New England. Quartermaster-Sergeant James H. Keough of Company A, Sixth Regiment, who recently broke the world's record in the indoor rifle match with Great Britain, has entered several matches. Another expert shot is Musician Chesley of Connecticut, who holds the world's 600 and 1200-yard records.

Interest for the day centres on the company-team match for the First Corps Cadets trophy. The contest lies between Company A, Sixth Regiment, of Wakefield, and Company D, First Regiment, of Norway, Me., both of which teams have won the prize two years.

BOATS HAVE MISHAPS IN BOSTON YACHT CLUB RUN

CAPE PORPOISE, Me., July 12.—The Boston Yacht Club fleet got away from here early to-day for Portland, a run of twenty-two miles. Several of the boats, although somewhat damaged by the northwester yesterday, left with the rest of the squadron, when the signal was given.

The trip from Little Harbor to this place was marred by several accidents, that experienced by the forty-two-foot sloop Acushlor II. being the most serious.

When halfway from the starting line to Cape Neddick, in a hard gust, the topmast did not prove strong enough at the rounds. As the spar went over the starboard side it carried with it the starboard spreader. Captain Ben Nickerson shot the sloop up into the wind to clear away the wreckage, but soon put her back on the course, and the Acushla finished second to the Golden Rod, which led the fleet at the finish.

It is said that when the Acushla II. lost her topmast one of her crew was injured, but probably not very badly. The sloop proceeded to Portland without giving the name of her injured member, and efforts in Portland to learn his name or condition were unavailing.

In addition to this, the catboat Eclipse, which is accompanying the fleet, parted a masthead shroud off Cape Neddick, and the sloop Mystic also got into trouble in the same locality, carrying away her rudder. Both were picked up and towed here by one of the launches that are with the fleet.

The yawl Syren, just after finishing, became mixed up with a launch, which resulted in the yawl losing her bowsprit. The sloop Cornets, just as she was beating into the harbor, carried away her halyards and was saved from going on the rocks by the launch Snapshot.

It was Golden Rod's day, with a strong breeze, fairly smooth water and a chance to start sheets, and she traveled like a scalded hog. On the stretch between Cape Neddick Nubble and Bald Head Cliff the Golden Rod passed the Acushla, crippled as she was, hung on like grim death, and the Golden Rod crossed the finish line at Old Prince Buoy with a lead of only three minutes forty-five seconds over the Acushla. The charted distance from Kitts Rock to the Old Prince Buoy is 24¼ nautical miles. The Golden Rod covered the distance in two hours, twenty-four minutes, twenty seconds, which is better than nine knots, fast time for a beam breeze.

Arthur Chesterton's old sloop Elaine was another boat that found the breeze to her liking. She was third boat to finish, only one minute, fifty-five seconds behind the Acushla. The twenty-two-footer Nutmeg finished fourth.

The winners by classes were: Special, open, Golden Rod; class A, Coralia; class B, Thera; class C, Elaine.

NORTHWESTER PLAYS HAVOC WITH EASTERN YACHT CLUB FLEET

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, Me., July 12.—A stirring northwester reached out a helping hand and gave the Eastern Yacht Club fleet some bully sport in the racing run from New Meadows River to this port.

Seventeen yachts in six classes struggled for racing honors against a soft southwester at the start and a reaching breeze at the finish that came in vicious puffs and did some damage, but still made an exciting finish.

The honors of the day rested with the schooners Emerald, Commodore F. Lew Clark; Irolita, F. Walter Clark, and the Verona, E. J. Bliss, and the sloops Adventuress, C. Rumill; Dorello, George L. Batchelder, and the Amoret, H. S. Wheelock.

The Humma, owned by Vice-Commodore R. T. Paine, 2d, won a private sweepstakes race with the Adventuress and Doris.

GIANTS HAVE THREE BEST TWIRLERS SAYS MEYERS

Chief Meyers, the Giants' catcher, has an idea that the New York Giants possess the three most remarkable pitchers in the game.

Now you may not agree with the remarks of the Indian catcher. That's all right, too. But the chief is entitled to his opinion. Here are the three men who the chief thinks are the most remarkable twirlers in the game and the reasons they are remarkable:

"Mathewson—Greatest pitcher of them all.

"Crandall—Nerviest pitcher.

"Marquard—Pitcher with widest and quickest breaking curve."

Now what do you think of the chief? Do you believe that Mathewson is the greatest pitcher in the world? Do you believe that Crandall is the nerviest? And finally, do you believe that Marquard, the "$10,000 beauty," has the fastest and the most sweeping break to his curve?

Meyers' Tribute to Matty.

"I think Mathewson is the greatest pitcher of them all," said the Indian.

"Do you know he would be even a greater pitcher if he were not so great? Sounds strange, doesn't it? But any manager will tell you that control is one of the pitchers' greatest assets. Many a pitcher has remained in the game long on his control, his knowledge of batsmen and his nerve.

"But I sometimes believe that Mathewson's perfect control is sometimes a detriment to him. Take a weak batter. If the pitcher is wold he pulls away from the plate. But if Matty is pitching he stands up there like the greatest slugger in the game. He has no fear. He knows that Matty has absolute control of that ball and that he is in no danger of being hit.

"He don't pull away from the plate. Not he. He stands right up there and takes a good, healthy swing at the ball. I believe that if Matty didn't have such perfect control oftentimes he would be better off.

Marquard No Lemon.

"Now about this Marquard. Don't get the impression that he is a lemon. He has one of the finest assortments of curves that I ever looked at. I think that he will develop into one of the greatest southpaws the game ever produced.

"He's only a kid. He doesn't take baseball seriously enough. Everything is a kid with him. You wait until he takes on a few more years. Wait until he settles down and realizes what a great thing it is to possess a great arm. Then he'll show you. I don't for a moment mean that you will have to wait years for him to become a great pitcher. But I mean he will become better and better as the years roll by. That fellow has a wonderful future ahead of him, I think.

Then he came to Crandall.

Crandall Long on Nerve.

"There is one nervy pitcher," said the big Indian. "There isn't a batter in the National League he fears. He's as calm in the great moments of a game as he is when the bases are empty and he is running easy.

"Nothing worries him. Not that he doesn't take things seriously. But he don't allow anything to get on his nerves. He's there to pitch ball. He is out there to do his best. He does it regardless of whether the bases are crowded in a close game or not. You simply can't rattle him. He's proof against it.

"What do I think of the race? It'll be a dandy all the way. And the winner? Oh, I woudn't say, although I think I know."

Meaning the Giants in the role of winners, of course. But he didn't say. He wouldn't until the pennant is cinched. Then he might remark that they had an excellent chance. For the Indian is conservative when his own ability is in question.

TERRY MARTIN PUTS IT ON TOM SAWYER

PORTLAND, Me., July 12.—A large crowd watched three very rapid boxing bouts at the Forest avenue grounds. In the main bout, between Terry Martin of Philadelphia and Tom Sawyer of Portland Martin had a clear lead at the end of the bout, but Sawyer made him earn it. In every round Martin sent his left to Sawyer's face frequently, and several times Sawyer gave a quick and sharp return. In the last round Sawyer sent a right to the face with telling effect, but he could not prevent Martin from landing with his left, and Martin proved to be quicker and was more aggressive from first to last.

DIXIE KID WINS IN BOUT WITH KENNEDY

NEW YORK, July 12.—The Dixie Kid scored a victory over Fighting Kennedy at the Olympic A. C. In the eighth round Kennedy's seconds threw up the sponge after their man had received a deep cut over his left eye. It was a hard battle from the start, with Kennedy making an excellent showing.

TOO MANY SIGNS HURT BASEBALL

Why don't we have as many stolen bases as in the golden days of baseball?

Somebody kindly speak up and answer the question.

Tyrus Cobb, the best pilferer of the American League, believes he can give some explanation of the scarcity of dots in the S. B. column. Ty says that players are hampered by the intricate system of signals. What do you think of that? Here many of the wiseacres of baseball have been saying that the one great and glaring fault of the Tigers is that they have not enough signals.

But Mr. Cobb thinks differently. He says a player in these days of highly developed inside baseball, has to remember 'steen signals, and that when he gets on the paths he cannot steal until the manager gives the cheerful nod from the coaching lines or from the bench.

Tyrus believes, or at least he says he does, that Billy Hamilton, a sweet swiper of the bases, and Billy Sunday, the present evangelist, would never have purloined so many bases had they to wait until the manager gave the hurry-up-now signal.

Maybe Cobb is right. Maybe he isn't. Inside baseball has revolutionized the game and it is supposed to be productive of more runs than the old go-as-you-please methods of the grand old days.

It has been generally believed that the art of pegging to second had cut down the daring runners. Cobb gives an interesting explanation at least. He is authority upon the art of stealing bases, too.

It is a well-known fact that runners generally await the manager's signal. Maybe if some of the flyers were let loose on the paths they would swipe more bases.

HORSE NOTES and SPEEDWAY

Henry Titer set a new record for workouts by trotters at the Readville track yesterday morning, when he stepped the bay gelding Bronson a mile in 2:12¼. Bronson had previously been two miles, in which he acted as pacemaker for the three-year-old colt Krill, the both in 2:15¼. Then Titer brought him out and after taking things easy to the half in 1:09, came the last half in 1:03½. It is understood that the proposed match race between Bronson and W. D. Hunt's trotter Alondra is off.

* * *

It is reported that D. W. Caton has refused an offer of $5,000 for his trotting mare Belvasia, 2:18¼, who won a good race at Hillsgrove last week. In this mare and the stallion McQuillin, 2:17½, who picked up two first monies at the same meeting, the Foxboro horsemen has two trotters that look first class.

* * *

Jimmy Carpenter drove the brown gelding Baron Aberdeen, by Baron Wilkes, 2:18, dam by Aberdeen, a mile in 2:15¼ the other morning. He has no record and will probably be saved over for next season's stakes.

* * *

While it is not thought that the trotting mare Annie Kohl, that went lame in a race at Hillsgrove last week, has a fractured bone in her ankle, as was at first reported, she has a badly wrenched leg and it is not expected that she will be able to race again this season.

* * *

Sam Corey's two-year-old colt by Aquillin, 2:19¾, dam by Charley Wilkes, 2:21¾, has been a quarter in 38 seconds, and is maikng speed fast.

* * *

Bob Proctor's stable of Grand Circuit horses, that were shipped from Readville to Grand Rapids Saturday afternoon had a hot time for the trip.

* * *

Trainer John Young, who brought nine two-year-olds to the Readville track from Allen farm, out the last one in the list yesterday morning. This is a wonderful showing for the famous breedeing establishment.

John W. Dorey will have charge of the horse racing department of the Barnstable fair, to be held August 31 to September 1.

* * *

Starting Judge Jason Edwards still has a few open dates for August and September.

* * *

Colonel Hall, the former owner of Asa Wilkes, 2:09*, is confident that the chestnut stallion will pace in 2:04 or better this season.

* * *

J. M. Hall's stallion Feros, by Bingen, 2:06¼, out of Nelly McGregor, 2:14, who is now in Titer's stable at the Readville track, is one of the finest looking horses in the country.

* * *

Fran' . Hall's three-year-old filly Belle Todd, Todd, 2:14¾, out of Belgard, 2:16 now in training at Readville, gives ever promise of becoming a fast trotter.

* * *

Don't forget that Ralph Wick, 2:13¼, is due to win a race or two before the season is over.

* * *

Mollie L., a two-year-old filly, owned by W. J. Iovell, Arlington, has been a mile in 2:40 with hardly any work. She is by Bingen, 2:06¼, out of a mare by Ashland Wilkes.

* * *

Charles Sanders, the former owner of Uhlan, 2:02¼, is inclined to be skeptical about the reported improvement that Doc Tanner has made in the shoeing and rigging of the great son of Bingen. He thinks that Bob Proctor had him hung up about right last season.

STRAIGHT TIPS FOR SPORT FANS

WHY DIDN'T JEFFRIES "COM back?" That's a bigger questi than "Will T. R. run again?" In fac while this big fight game was going o you couldn't sell a solitary newspaper o the strength of T. R. meeting Bill Taf and for once in his life, the Mighty Hu ter had to take a back seat.

By the way, has anybody around he heard anything from Oyster Bay or ther abouts since before the fight. I confe I haven't heard a peep.

And it looks it was going on foreve with all the talk about the moving pi tures, and trying to bribe Jack Johnsin to "throw" the fight, and "doping" Je and trying to "dope" Johnson, and mo bing the Dark Cloud.

A tip to the anti-picture people. I you really want to get rid of them wi despatch forget them. They'll die a nat ral death quicker than death by violenc

ALSO, ONE OF THE MOST PECULIA things about this fight is that th women—who are expected to shudd over such hideous things as prize fights all picked the winner. The men g worked up sentimentally, and all th thought of was the "White Man's Hop and other rot like that.

The women—funny, isn't it?—forg the sentimental part of it, and, to a ma —no, to a woman—picked Jack Johnsin. You'll all agree with me, because I'll b all I lost on Jeffries that you got straight tip from that source, just like I did; and, also, an "I told you so," aft you'd lost your coin.

Bank on it, the women were just a excited about it as you were; and, whats more, doped it out right. No "White Man's Hope" for them. Guess it's up t us men to keep up the sentimental si of life, and let the women do the reaso ing—also the working?

BARON MUNCHAUSEN CERTAINLY never had anything on that bunch of Salem sport fans who tried to kid me into believing that two of their number ran the century in 9 2-3 flat. Now they come to the bat with additional bunk, to the effect that one Tommie Carr again beat Joe McCarthy, and not only beat him but clipped a fifth of a second off the previous mark. I told that bunch before that they must have timed the men with Ingersolls. I take back evrything I said. There must not have been a watch in the crowd. They either counted the seconds on their fingers or were doped by Mossy Flynn's cigars, so that they thought the hour hand was the second hand.

Straight Tips—As manager of one of the sporting clubs of Rockland, I take the liberty of writing you. After reading your many challenges to certain boneheads, etc., to come up to your room and you would hand them all they were looking for, etc., we have come to the conclusion that if you can use your fins as any one would be made to believe by following your ramblings, one might be able to clean up a little hard stuff by acting as your manager and staking you in a few preliminaries around town. Therefore I ask your permission to drop in and see you some day that is agreeable to you, and I will look you over and attend to all details, etc. Yours, very respectfully, MATHEW CONNORS,
Manager Union Square Sporting Club,

Come ahead bo. Always gald to see the boys. I think pretty well of your tip, too. If a man can draw down a couple of hundred thousand beans for a scrap like poor Jeff put up, there's no use of my working around a newspaper office any longer. Think I could do nearly as well myself, at half the price. But I don't want any manager; I want the whole works myself if there's going to be any rough stuff.

Straight Tips—Forgive me for being so ignorant, but my friends tell me in all seriousness that Johnson did not come out a victor. Please enlighten me, as I have a wager on this gladiatorial contest. Sincerely,

PACKY SEEKS WOLGAST BOUT

CHICAGO, July 12.—Packey McFarland will be here within a month to camp on the trail of Lightweight Champion Ad Wolgast. This information was received here in a letter from John McFarland. According to the brother of the fighting end of the McFarland family, there is little possibility of a return match between McFarland and Welsh, as the latter has stated that he does not care to any more of Packey's game. The fighting Irishman from the stockyards believes that he can make 133 pounds ringside and be strong, and will rush to Chicago and endeavor to secure a match for Labor Day at Milwaukee with Wolgast.

NELSON AND DOHERTY MEET IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, July 12.—An excellent card has been arranged for the Sharkey Athletic Club to-morrow night. In the main attraction "Battling" Jack Nelson, who made short work of the "Fighting Harp" last week will meet Jeff Doherty, the New Haven fighter. They are matched for ten rounds. There will be five other bouts, including a six-round wind-up.

CHARLEY HERZOG NOT TO BE SOLD

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 12.—John P. Harris of this city, vice-president of the Boston Nationals, is authority for the statement that Charley Herzog is not to be traded.

"It is also a myth that we intend to replace Manager Fred Lake," he said.

"President Dovey's visit here had nothing to do with the Herzog affair, but to talk over the plans of the two new bleachers we intend to build while the team is on this Western trip.

"President Dovey and myself realize that in Lake we have a manager that understands the game and one who will build up the team. He is a fighter and will fight for his rights. Herzog and the rest of the players must be made to understand that Lake is manager of the team, and the suspension on Herzog will not be raised until he makes his peace with Lake.

"We suspect that someone connected with the other clubs has been talking to our players. At least two of them have been taken from us by making them dissatisfied, and we do not intend to permit others to be grabbed by the same means. Heretofore the Boston club has not resented such tricks, but from now on our policy will be a figting one."

A Quick Temper and Its Many Evils

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE most stubborn fault to overcome, perhaps, in the list of human frailties is a quick temper.

In every score of men and women taken at random, from the lowest to the highest classes, nineteen are proved to be easily irritated, enraged or made resentful in feelings by the daily trifles which are so much more difficult to bear with composure than great troubles.

You who read these words are saying to yourself, perhaps, that they do not apply to you; that you are never put out of temper even by serious matters.

Yet, set a watch upon your mind for one day and discover the truth, and then you will be in a position to profit by this little discussion of an almost universal fault

An erroneous impression has largely prevailed in the world that a quick temper indicated "spirit" and was more or less a mark of high qualities.

Must Overcome Temper

I have heard parents speak of the tendency of a child to fly into a passion with a certain visible pride, which the child was not slow to perceive.

Our educational institutions do not seem to regard the fault as one to treat seriously, and our religious teachers deal gently with it.

Culture bids us control our exhibition of temper, but does not tell us how necessary it is to overcome the feeling within.

But in the philosophy of the ancient philosophers we find valuable counsels which are based upon scientific facts regarding the emotion of anger. Here is a quotation from one of the teachers from the land which we call heathen—India:

"If a man does evil to us we instantly want to react evil, and this impulse uses up the fine material out of which the mind-stuff is made, and vitiates its power. Every reaction in the form of anger, hatred or ill-will, every evil thought or deed is so much loss to the power of the mind. Each time we control such a thought, or feeling, it is a direct gain to the mind-power. Not only do we gain control of ourselves, but it is just so much energy stored up in our favor; this piece of energy will be converted into the higher powers."

Valuable Knowledge

Then we are instructed how to control the breath and the body in order to gain concentration and to obtain complete mastery of the mind.

All this is valuable and important knowledge to a human being anxious to make the best use of his life and to increase the happiness and goodness of the human family by becoming good and happy himself.

In the present hurried, heated and excitable method of life, it is a most severe effort to keep amiable, kind and full of good feeling to all human beings, as we push and crowd through the world in pursuit of what we think is success.

There are some things we know better to-day than any one knew a thousand or fifty years ago.

Other things were known better a thousand and five thousand years ago than we

Concentration was one of these things. The tendency of modern times is to scatter our mind forces—and to render us irritable, resentful and ill-tempered. Here is a little formula which will help us all in our search for control, composure and concentration:

Sit in a quiet room in a comfortable chair, erect, with the hands resting lightly on the knees.

Close the eyes, inhale a deep breath through the nostrils until counting seven, hold the breath while counting the same, and slowly exhale the same length of time. Think, as you inhale, that you are taking in from God's universe good health, good will, success, happiness and usefulness and making them your own. Do this for five minutes only, morning and night, and see if your nerves do not become more under your control and the task of keeping amiable less difficult.

CURZON AND MRS. ASTOR

AMERICANS in Paris who have observed Ava Astor, who obtained a divorce from Colonel John Jacob Astor, report they would not be surprised to learn of her engagement to wed Lord Curzon of Kedleston. They have seen her frequently with Lord Curzon, and there is a hint that he is weary of being a widower. He is said to be a devoted suitor of the famous American beauty. Lord Curzon inherited a large amount of money from his first wife, who was a Miss Leiter. Mrs. Astor herself is wealthy in her own right and received a large settlement from Colonel Astor. The couple undoubtedly would give lavish entertainments. What further is said to support the rumor of an engagement is the extravagant manner in which Mrs. Astor now is buying hats, gowns and various other articles that might constitute a trousseau. At a dinner which Mrs. Astor recently gave in London in honor of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Lord Curzon was one of the favored guests.

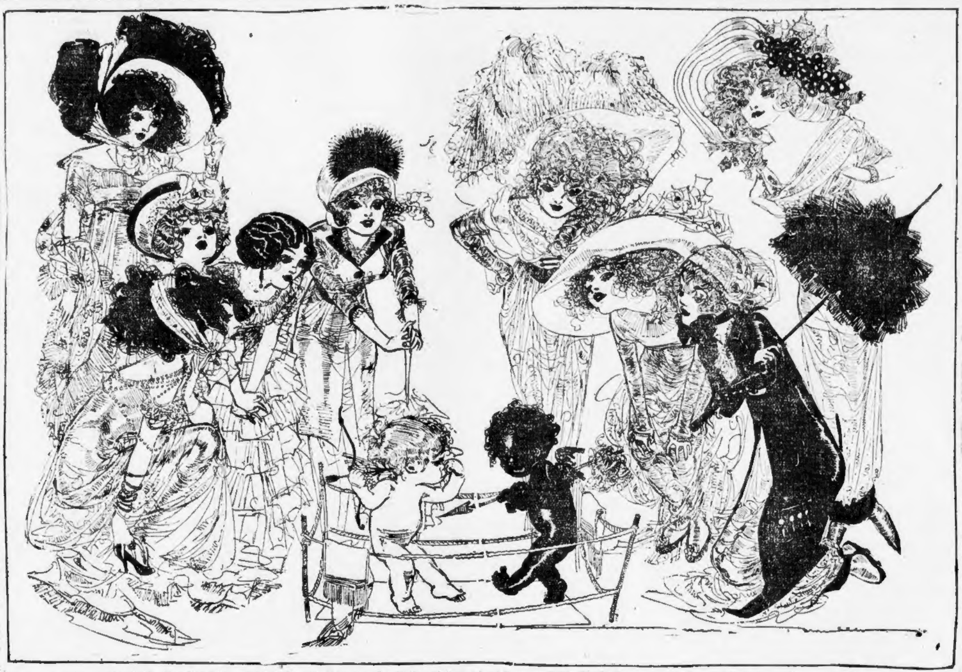
The Perpetual Championship Contest

By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner



And there is a perpetual championship contest going on between the little white god of Love and the black demon of Jealousy. Most times the arena, where the battle to the death is waged, is in the heart of the fairest of the Betty folk. When the little white god wins the bout there is joy and happiness and good cheer, but when the little black demon wins there is sadness and sorrow and life-long longing for the days and ways of "might-have-been."

The Manicure Lady

SHE OBJECTS TO THE HEAT

"I DIDN'T sleep none at all last night," said the Manicure Lady. "The humidity was something terrible. Honest to goodness, George, every time I sat up in my bed and looked at them curtains that wasn't moving an inch a hour I felt like jumping out of the window into the cool Charles. I don't see how the people down town stands it. I certainly would go mad if I had to cook in a tenement."

"It's all in getting used to it," said the Head Barber. "I was brought up in a cabin up near the top of a mountain out in Arizona. It used to get hot down on the desert in the Summer, but it wasn't ever very hot upon the mountain. I used to run around and catch trout with a pin hook and find snow in the little corners where the sun never butted in, and I never thought anything about feeling too warm at night, unless I had been warmed by the old gent for staying out too late along some of the trout streams.

"But when I first came to the city, where the sun ain't half so hot as it is out on the desert, but where the moist stuff is working overtime, I learned what it is to get along without a breath of fresh air.

"Our flat is fierce, nights like last night. I wallow around like a mackerel trying to side-step a net; I get up and get in the bathtub, full of cold water. I try every chair and every soft spot in the flat, and then I ain't cool. The long and short of it, kid, is that you and me ain't in condition or we wouldn't feel the heat."

"I never had any idea that my condition wasn't right," said the Manicure Lady. "I ain't over weight, and I don't drink anything except cooling drinks and I don't eat much food. I follow all them health hints about how to keep cool on the Summer nights, word for word and line for line.

"For instance, George, I saw in one of the morning papers where some big doctor had laid down these rules: First, don't eat any liquids. Second, don't sleep except in a horizontal position. Third, on a very hot day don't run to catch a subway train that is just pulling out of the station. Fourth, don't strike the traffic policeman when he tries to help you out of the way of a surface car. Fifth, buy an ice-box, but don't drink too much ice water, as the ice-box needs the ice."

"There ain't any sense or reason following them rules," said the Head Barber. "In the first place, kiddo," he continued, "the poor old doctors that lays down them rules about what to drink and what not to drink is shriveled up old shrimps that used to drink as much in the dear dead past as any bunch of young souses that we have with us today. After drinking a million dry cocktails and a hundred thousand pints of dry wine, they was pretty well through the drying-out process, and then they sat down to tell the youth of our noble land what they should not swallow. I hate to see a dog in the manger trying to keep the flower of American manhood from bossing a bar boy, and the only reason I don't get really sore is because I know that the flower of American manhood is bound to grab his drinks when he wants them."

"Do you think you know more about keeping cool than them doctors," asked the Manicure Lady.

"I don't have to know anything about keeping cool," said the Head Barber. "I just keep cool, because I never worry and never look in the Sunday papers to see how many cucumbers I should eat. If I feel too warm nights, like last night, I just get in the old tub and turn on the cold water thing. There's one article that the humidity and hot sun can't bluff—the cold water thing. If you're as warm as a boiled owl, two or three minutes in the cold tub will cool you."

"It doesn't cool me," said the Manicure Lady.

"You'll have to show me," said the Head Barber.

"Huh!" exclaimed the Manicure Lady. "The heat is scrambling your brains, George. There comes a man with long hair. Trim him."

OBJECT TO RUDE SOCIETY

MEMBERS of the nobility in England have started a crusade against bad manners in society. The women, who socially are interested in this work are Cora, Duchess of Strafford, the Duchess of Sutherland and also the Countess of Granard, who was Beatrice Mills. These women decided several months ago, even before the death of King Edward, that something must be done to correct the rudeness that was creeping into society. Men and women seemed to think they should be brusque and off-handed toward persons whom they knew slightly. They argued that if they were polite, they would encourage social climbers and they said they must go on the principle: "Well, I wonder what so-and-so is trying to get out of me. I must nip this courteousness in the bud." It is said that when the mourning for King Edward is over and society again becomes as gay as it formerly was, a plan will be worked out to rebuke those persons who place a premium on rudeness.

TO-DAY'S BEST STORY

AT a certain church it was the pleasing custom at a marriage for the clergyman to kiss the bride after the ceremony. A young lady who was about to be married in the church did not relish the prospect, and instructed her prospective husband when making arrangements to tell the clergyman that she did not wish him to kiss her. The bridegroom did as directed.

"Well, George," said the young lady when he appeared, "did you tell the clergyman that I did not wish him to kiss me?"

"Oh, yes."

"And what did he say?"

"He said that in that case he would charge only half the usual fee."

What Have You Done To-Day?

WE shall do so much in the years to come.
But what have we done to-day?
We shall give our gold in a princely sum,
But what did we give today?
We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,
We shall plant a hope in the place of fear,
We shall speak the words of love and cheer,
But what did we speak to-day?

We shall be so kind in the after-a-while,
But what have we been to-day?
We shall bring to each lonely life a smile,
But what have we brought to-day?
We shall give to truth a grander birth,
And to steadfast faith a deeper worth,
We shall feed the hungering souls of earth,
But whom have we fed to-day?

We shall reap such joys in the by-and-by,
But what have we sown to-day?
We shall build large mansions towering so high,
But what have we built to-day?
'Tis sweet in idle dreams to bask,
But, here and now, do we do our task?
Yes, this is the thing our soul must ask,
"What have we done to-day?"

SPIDER STINGS FAIR CHEEKS

THE spider beauty spot has been introduced into New York. It was imported from Paris and is another creation of an imaginative veil manufacturer. Women have worn veils that obscured their eyes by black patches and gave their faces a freckled appearance. Leaves, insects, birds and aeroplanes have figured in the mesh. Men have even ridiculed them by calling them "birthmark veils." Now comes the insistent manufacturer who has the spider veil, and, despite previous rebuffs, he says it must go. The spider is an exact copy of the insect itself and is posed on the outside of the veil, giving the impression of a stray spider that is crawling over the hat. The insect is almost an inch and a half in diameter. The veil itself resembles a spider's web and is daintily and artistically woven.

CHASE & SANBORN'S HIGH GRADE TEAS & COFFEES

GOSSIP

MARGARET ESTHER CRAGIN

THIS little word of only six letters knows everything about everybody, and all things, past, present and to come, that ever did, could, would, should, cannot, will not, or never shall happen, and is aware of all things that have taken place, and of a great many things that never have been done.

It is much better informed about you than you are yourself, knows your morals better than your minister, your constitution better than your doctor, your income better than your banker, and the day you were born on better than your mother.

It knows that you starve your servants because you are poor and like to save on the butcher and baker; it knows that you overpay them because you are rich and want them to keep your secrets.

It knows that some great-grandmother's cousin of yours was hanged for forgery; it knows that your silk stockings have cotton tops to them; it knows that your heirloom guipure is imitation made the other day.

It knows that you had green peas six weeks before anybody else; it knows that you have had four dinner parties this week and are living on your capital.

It knows that when you took that trip to Europe you only went as far as—oh, indeed it is perfectly true—had it on the best authority, dreadful, incredible, but perfectly true.

Yes, this little eerie, weirdlike elf is omniscient and omnipresent, microscopic and telescopic; it is a court edition of a detective agency, and a pocket edition of a cabinet; it speaks as many interrogations as a telegraph wire, and has as many mysteries as the veiled lady in a murder trial; only it always answers it own questions, and has all the keys to its own mysteries, and, what is still more comforting, always knows everything for "certain."

In point of fact there is nothing that it does not know. Except to be sure, it never knows that Mr. Blank's business is not everything that it should be, this it never knows and never admits, because if it did it could not very well drink Mr. Blank's champagne, and might lose for its daughter's Mrs. Blank's dances. Indeed its perpetual loquacity has most solemn and impressive interludes of dumbness and deafness when any incautious speaker, not trained to its ways, hints that Mr. Blank gets his money in some queer manner, or that Mrs. Blank would be out of society anywhere else; then, indeed does it draw itself up with injured dignity, and rebuke such a blundering, puzzled, outspoken one with murmurs of Christian charity.

Disillusionment of the Honeymoon

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

THE WEEK WITH HIS FOLKS

IT was the third morning after their arrival that Helen awoke with a blinding headache.

"I don't think I can go down to breakfast."

"Shall I have mother send you up something?" asked Warren, busy putting the cuff buttons into a fresh shirt.

"Only some coffee. I couldn't eat anything."

"Sure you don't want anything else?" when a few moments later he started down.

"No," faintly. "Only some strong coffee; that may help."

She thought it would be sent at once, but it wasn't. Her head throbbed cruelly. She got up and darkened the room, and then lay down again.

He came up from breakfast. "How's your head now? Did the coffee help?"

"It didn't come."

"It didn't come? Why, I told mother to send it. I guess she forgot. I'll go down and see."

Did They Care So Little?

She turned her face to the wall. She was hurt—hurt all through. He had not even troubled to see that it was sent. He had merely given the order and then forgotten all about it. And his mother, too, had forgotten! Did they care so little? She was a bride on her first visit to his people—was she to receive no more attention than this?

Warren came back now, followed by the maid with the coffee.

"Jane had to go on an errand for father—that's why she couldn't bring it. Mother asked if you would like a headache powder?"

"No—they never help. I'll just have to be quiet this morning. She was trying to drink the coffee Jane had left by the bed. But the cup was cracked and the handle of the coffee pot was wet and sticky, and there was a large brown stain on the napkin where the coffee had spilled over on the way up stairs.

She thought of the dainty tray her mother would have brought her, and the wave of homesickness that she had been fighting all morning swept over her. Oh, if she were only home! If she could only have the care and attention and love her mother always gave her!

She pushed back the coffee almost untasted.

"Aren't you going to drink it?" He was standing awkwardly by the bed, his whole attitude implied that he was ill at ease, that he didn't know quite what to do. This was the first time Helen had been at all ill since their marriage, and he felt it was a situation with which he could not cope. When he had the headache, he wanted only to be let alone, but he vaguely felt that Helen wanted something more.

"Aren't you going to drink any of it? He repeated more awkwardly.

"Not now—I don't believe I can."

He Lingered Uncertainly

There was a long silence. He felt a growing sense of irritation, partly because of his awkwardness and his conscious inability to rise to the occasion. Surely he could not be expected to stand there in a darkened room. A mere headache was not so serious as that.

"If there isn't anything I can do for you—I think I'd better go over to the apartment and see how the painters are getting along with that dining room work."

"Very well."

"I'll be back around one, I hope you'll be better by then."

He lingered uncertainly, but as she made no comment, he went out, closing the door after him.

She waited until his steps died down the hall—and then she burst into tears.

"If there isn't anything I can do for you!" And she had wanted him to come over and kneel by the bed and kiss her hands and tell her how sorry he was that she was ill—how worried and anxious!

She wanted all the petting and cuddling that every young wife wants when she is sick (however slight that sickness may be), but that not one husband in a thousand knows how to give—and certainly Warren did not!

SYNOPSIS

HAMILTON FYNES, the only occupant of a special train which arrives in London from Liverpool at midnight, has been murdered. When the London station master calls a physician, the latter points to the dagger, which has entered behind the dead man's left shoulder.

The detectives can find no trace of the murderer. All that they discover is that the murdered man is from America, having arrived at Liverpool on the Lusitania. He is the only passenger allowed to land, and he was put ashore after he showed a letter to the captain of the vessel which gave him that privilege. He secured the special train at Liverpool by means of another letter. The detectives find a hidden pocket in the coat of the murdered man, but there is nothing in it.

The story tells of how an injured man was picked up fifteen miles from London, on the line of the railroad, by an autoist, and is carried to a physician. He says that he has been in a bicycle accident and pays the physician a goodly sum for his services.

Miss Penelope Morse calls at the Hotel Carlton and asks for Hamilton Fynes, saying that she had a luncheon engagement with him. The hotel clerk tells her of the murder, and later when she is questioned by the detectives and reporters, she says that she knows nothing of the murdered man.

She leaves the hotel in a taxicab and succeeds in eluding two cars in which newspaper men try to follow her. Later she calls on Dicky Vanderpole, a fellow American, who is an attaché at the American embassy, and tells him what she knows of Hamilton Fynes. This is to the effect that Fynes was a secret messenger for the American Government, and she had carried a message for him on a previous trip. It appears Fynes was killed to secure his papers. The mystery is, who or what government would most profit by them.

When the other passengers on the Lusitania reach London, James B. Coulson, the only man who had associated with Fynes on shipboard, told his story to the reporters and police. He professed to know little of Fynes, and expressed the belief that robbery was the motive.

He telephones to Vanderpole, however. The two meet and Coulson is revealed as another secret agent. He gives Vanderpole the duplicate papers. Vanderpole leaves in a taxi. On the way to the embassy he is killed.

To-day's installment opens with Miss Morse and party waiting the arrival of Vanderpole and the Illustrious Prince for a hotel dinner.

CHAPTER VIII.

An Interrupted Theatre Party.

SEATED upon a roomy lounge in the foyer of the Savoy were three women who attracted more than an average amount of attention from the passers-by. In the middle was the Duchess of Devenham, erect, stately, and with a figure which was still irreproachable notwithstanding her white hair. On one side sat her daughter, Lady Grace Redford, tall, fair, and comely; on the other, Miss Penelope Morse. The two girls were amusing themselves, watching the people; their chaperon had her eye upon the clock.

"To dine at half-past seven," the Duchess remarked, as she looked around the entresol of the great restaurant through her lorgnettes, "is certainly a little trying for one's temper and for one's digestion, but so long as those men accepted, I certainly think they ought to have been here. They know that the play begins at a quarter to nine."

"It isn't like Dicky Vanderpole in the least," Penelope said. "Since he began to tread the devious paths of diplomacy, he has brought exactness in the small things of life down to a fine art."

"He isn't half so much fun as he used to be," Lady Grace declared.

"Fun!" Penelope exclaimed. "Sometimes I think that I never knew a more trying person."

"I have never known the Prince unpunctual," the Duchess murmured. "I consider him absolutely the best-mannered young man I know."

Lady Grace smiled, and glanced at Penelope.

"I don't think you'll get Penelope to agree with you, mother," she said.

"Why not, my dear?" the Duchess asked. "I heard that you were quite rude to him the other evening. We others all find him so charming."

Penelope's lip curled slightly.

"He has so many admirers," she remarked, "that I dare say he will not notice my absence from the ranks. Perhaps I am a little prejudiced. At home, you know, we have rather strong opinions about this fusion of races."

The Duchess raised her eyebrows.

"But a Prince of Japan, my dear Penelope" she said. "A cousin of the Emperor, and a member of an aristocracy which was old before we were thought of! Surely you cannot class Prince Malyo amongst those to whom any of your country people could take exception."

Penelope shrugged her shoulders slightly.

"Perhaps," she said, "my feeling is the result of hearing you all praise him so much and so often. Besides, apart from that, you must remember that I am a patriotic daughter of the Stars and Stripes, and there isn't much friendship lost between Washington and Tokio just now."

Belated Guests.

The Duchess turned away to greet a man who had paused before their couch on his way into the restaurant.

"My dear General," she said, "it seems to me that one meets every one here! Why was not restaurant dining the vogue when I was a girl!"

General Sherriff smiled. He was tall and thin, with grizzled hair and worn features. Notwithstanding his civilian's clothes, there was no possibility of mistaking him anywhere, or under any circumstances, for anything but a soldier.

"It is a delightful custom," he admitted. "It keeps one always on the 'qui vive;' one never knows whom one may see. Incidentally, I find it interferes very much with my digestion."

"Digestion!" the Duchess murmured. "But then, you soldiers lead such irregular lives."

"Not always from choice," the General reminded her. "The Russo-Japanese war finished me off. They kept us far enough away from the fighting, when they could, but, by Jove, they did make us move!"

"We are waiting now for Prince Malyo," the Duchess remarked. "You know him?"

"Know him!" the General answered. "Duchess, if ever I have to write my memoirs, and particularly my reminiscences of this war, I fancy you would find the name of your friend appear there pretty frequently. There wasn't a more brilliant feat of arms in the whole campaign than his flanking movement at Mukden. I met most of the Japanese leaders, and I have always said that I consider him the most wonderful of them all."

The Illustrious Prince.

The Duchess turned to Penelope.

"Do you hear that?" she asked.

Penelope smiled.

"The Fates are against me," she declared. "If I may not like, I shall at least be driven to admire."

"To talk of bravery when one speaks of that war," the General remarked, "seems invidious, for it is my belief that throughout the whole of the Japanese army such a thing as fear did not exist. They simply did not know what the word meant. But I shall never forget that the only piece of hand-to-hand fighting I saw during the whole time was a cavalry charge led by Prince Malyo against an immensely superior force of Russians. Duchess," the General declared, "those Japanese on their queer little horses went through the enemy like wind through a cornfield. That young man must have borne a charmed life. I saw him riding and cheering his men on when he must have had at least half a dozen wounds in his body. You will pardon me, Duchess? I see that my party are waiting."

The General hurried away. The Duchess shut up her lorgnettes with a snap, and held out her hand to a newcomer who had come from behind the palms.

"My dear Prince," she exclaimed, "this is charming of you! Some one told me that you were not well,—our wretched climate, of course—and I was so afraid, every moment, that we should receive your excuses."

The newcomer, who was bowing over her hand, was of medium height or a trifle less, dark, and dressed with the quiet exactness of an English gentleman. Only a slight narrowness of the eyes and a greater alertness of movement seemed to distinguish him in any way, as regards nationality, from the men by whom he was surrounded. His voice, when he spoke, contained no trace of accent. It was soft and singularly pleasant. It had, too, one somewhat rare quality—a delightful ring of truth. Perhaps that was one of the reasons why Prince Malyo was just then, amongst certain circles, one of the most popular persons in Society.

"My dear Duchess," he said, "my indisposition was nothing. And as for your climate, I am beginning to delight in it—one never knows what to expect, or when one may catch a glimpse of the sun. It is only the grayness which is always the same."

"And even that," the Duchess remarked, smiling, "has been yellow for the last few days. Prince, you know my daughter Grace, and I am sure that you have met Miss Penelope Morse? We are waiting for two other men, Sir Charles Somerfield and Mr. Vanderpole."

The Prince bowed, and began to talk to his hostess' daughter,—a tall, fair girl, as yet only in her second season.

"Here comes Sir Charles, at any rate!" the Duchess exclaimed. "Really, I think we shall have to go in. We can leave a message for Dickey; they all know him at this place. I am afraid he is one of those shocking young men who entertain the theatrical profession here to supper."

A footman at that moment brought a note to the Duchess, which she tore open.

"This is from Dicky!" she exclaimed, glancing it through quickly.—"Savoy notepaper, too, so I suppose he has been there. He says that he may be a few minutes late and that we are not to wait. He will pick us up either here or at the theatre. Prince, shall we let these young people follow us? I haven't heard your excuses yet. Do you know that you were a quarter of an hour late?"

He bent towards her with troubled face.

"Dear Duchess," he said, "believe me, I am conscious of my fault. An unexpected matter, which required my personal attention, presented itself at the last moment. I think I can assure you that nothing of its sort was ever accomplished so quickly. It would only weary you if I tried to explain."

"Please don't," the Duchess begged, "so long as you are here at last. And after all, you see, you are not the worst sinner. Mr. Vanderpole has not yet arrived."

The Prince walked on, for a few steps, in silence.

"Mr. Vanderpole is a great friend of yours, Duchess?" he asked.

The Duchess shook her head.

"I do not know him very well," she said. "I asked him for Penelope."

The Prince looked puzzled.

"But I thought," he said, "that Miss Morse and Sir Charles——"

The Duchess interrupted him with a smile.

Penelope's Brusqueries

"Sir Charles is very much in earnest," she whispered, "but very very slow. Dicky is just the sort of man to spur him on. He admires Penelope and does not intend showing it. She is such a dear girl that I should love to have her comfortably settled over here."

"She is very intelligent," the Prince said. "She is a young lady, indeed, for whom I have a great admiration. I am only sorry," he concluded, "that I do not seem able to interest her."

"You must not believe that," the Duchess said. "Penelope is a little brusque sometimes, but it is only her manner."

They made their way through the foyer to the round table which had been reserved for them in the centre of the restaurant.

"I suppose I ought to apologize for giving you dinner at such an hour," the Duchess remarked, "but it is our theatrical managers who are to blame. Wry they cannot understand that the best play in the world is not worth more than two hours of our undivided attention, and begin everything at nine or a quarter-past, I cannot imagine."

The Prince smiled.

"Dear Duchess," he said, "I think that you are a nation of sybarites. Everything in the world must run for you so smoothly or you are not content. For my part, I like to dine at this hour."

"But then, you take no luncheon, Prince," Lady Grace reminded him.

"I never lunch out," the Prince answered, "but I have always what is sufficient for me."

"Tell me," the Duchess asked, "is it true that you are thinking of settling down amongst us? Your picture is in the new illustrated paper this week, you know, with a little sketch of your career. We are given to understand that you may possibly make your home in this country."

The Prince smiled, and in his smile there seemed to be a certain mysticism. One could not tell indeed, whether it came from some pleasant thought flitting through his brain, or whether it was that the idea itself was so strange to him.

"I have no plans, Duchess," he said, "our country is very delightful, and the hospitality of friends I have made over here is too wonderful a thing to be described; but one never knows."

Lady Grace bent toward Sir Charles, who was sitting by her side.

"I can never understand the Prince," she murmured. "Always he seems as though he took life so earnestly. He has a look upon his face which I never see in the faces of any of your other young men."

"He is a bit on the serious side," Sir Charles admitted.

"It isn't only that," she continued. "He reminds me of that man whom we all used to go and hear preach at the Oratory. He was the same in the pulpit and when one saw him in the street. His eyes seemed to see through one; he seemed to be living in a world of his own."

"He was a religious Johnny, of course," Sir Charles remarked. "They do walk about with their heads in the air."

Lady Grace smiled.

"Perhaps it is religion with the Prince," she said,—"religion of a sort."

High Value of Human Life

"I tell you what I do think," Sir Charles murmured. "I think his pretence at having a good time over here is all a bluff. He doesn't really cotton to us, you know. Don't see how he could. He's never touched a polo stick in his life, knows nothing about cricket, is indifferent to games, and doesn't even understand the meaning of the word 'Sportsman.' There's no place in this country for a man like that."

Lady Grace nodded.

"I think," she said, "that his visit to Europe and his stay amongst us is, after all, in the nature of a pilgrimage. I suppose he wants to carry back some of our civilization to his own people."

Penelope, who overheard, laughed softly and leaned across the table.

"I fancy," she murmured, "that the person you are speaking of would not look at it in quite the same light."

"Has any one seen the evening paper?" the Duchess asked. "Is there any more news about that extraordinary murder?"

"Nothing fresh in the early editions," Sir Charles answered.

"I think," the Duchess declared, "that it is perfectly scandalous. Our police system must be in a disgraceful state. Tell me, Prince—could anything like that happen in your country?"

"Without doubt," the Prince answered, "life moves very much in the East as with you here. Only with us," he added a little thoughtfully, "there is a difference, a difference of which one is reminded at a time like this, when one reads your newspapers and hears the conversation of one's friends."

"Tell us what you mean?" Penelope asked quickly.

He looked at her as one might have looked at a child—kindly, even tolerantly. He was scarcely so tall as she was, and Penelope's attitude toward him was marked all the time with a certain frigidity. Yet he spoke to her with the quiet, courteous confidence of the philosopher who unbends to talk to a child.

"In this country," he said, "you place so high a value upon the gift of life. Nothing moves you so greatly as the killing of one man by another, or the death of a person whom you know."

"There is no tragedy in the world so great!" Penelope declared.

The Prince shrugged his shoulders very slightly.

No Tragedy So Great

"My dear Miss Morse," he said, "it is so that you think about life and death here. Yet you call yourself a Christian country—you have a very beautiful faith. With us, perhaps, there is a little more philosophy and something a little less definite in the trend of our religion. Yet we do not dress Death in black clothes or fly from his outstretched hand. We fear him no more than we do the night. It is a thing that comes—a thing that must be."

He spoke so softly, and yet with so much conviction, that it seemed hard to answer him. Penelope, however, was conscious of an almost feverish desire either to contradict him or to prolong the conversation by some means or other.

"Your point of view," she said, "is well enough, Prince, for those who fall in battle, fighting for their country or for a great cause. Don't you think, though, that the horror of death is a more real thing in a case like this, where a man is killed in cold blood for the sake of robbery, or perhaps revenge?"

"One cannot tell," the Prince answered thoughtfully. "The battlefields of life are there for every one to cross. This mysterious gentleman who seems to have met with his death so unexpectedly—he, too, may have been the victim of a cause, knowing his dangers, facing them as a man should face them."

The Duchess sighed.

"I am quite sure, Prince," she said, "that you are a romanticist. But, apart from the sentimental side of it, do things like this happen in your country?"

"Why not?" the Prince answered. "It is as I have been saying; for a worthy cause, or a cause which he believed to be worthy, there is no man of my country worthy of the name who would not accept death with the same resignation that he lays his head upon the pillow and waits for sleep."

Sir Charles raised his glass and bowed across the table.

"To our great allies!" he said, smiling.

The Prince drank his glass of water thoughtfully. He drank wine only on very rare occasions, and then under compulsion. He turned to the Duchess.

"A few days ago," he said, "I heard myself described as being much too serious a person. To-night I am afraid that I am living up to my reputation. Our conversation seems to have drifted into somewhat gloomy channels. We must ask Miss Morse, I think, to help us to forget. They say," he continued, "that it is the young ladies of your country who hold open the gates of Paradise for their menkind."

Heritage from the West

He was looking into her eyes. His tone was half bantering, half serious. From across the table Penelope knew that Somerfield was watching her closely. Somehow or other, she was irritated and nervous, and she answered vaguely. Sir Charles intervened with a story about some of their acquaintances, and the conversation drifted into more ordinary channels.

"Some day, I suppose," the Duchess remarked, as the service of dinner drew toward a close, "you will have restaurants like this in Tokio"

The Prince assented.

"Yes," he said without enthusiasm, "they will come. Our heritage from the West is a sure thing. Not in my time, perhaps, or in the days of those that follow me, but they will come."

"I think that it is absolutely wicked of Dicky," the Duchess declared, as they rose from the table. "I shall never rely upon him again."

"After all, perhaps, it isn't his fault," Penelope said, breathing a little sigh of relief as she rose to her feet. "Mr. Harvey is not always considerate, and I know that several of the staff are away on leave."

"That's right, my dear," the Duchess said, smiling, "stick up for your countrymen. I suppose he'll find us sometime during the evening. We can all go to the theatre together; the omnibus is outside.

We particularly wish to hear from the excessively thin, those who know the humiliation and embarrassment which only skinny people have to suffer in silence. We want to send a free 50-cent package of our new discovery to the people who are called "slats" and "bean poles," to bony women, whose clothes never look "anyhow," no matter how expensively dressed, to the skinny men who fail to gain social or business recognition on account of their starved appearance. If we cannot put pounds and pounds of healthy flesh on your frame we don't want your money.

The new treatment increases the red corpuscles in the blood, strengthens the nerves and puts the digestive tract into such shape that your food is assimilated and turned into good, solid, healthy flesh instead of passing through the system undigested and unassimilated. Plenty of Hot Weather Fun for All

It wasn't hard to find good things in the programme at Keith's Theatre yesterday, and the man with the perspiring brow quickly forgot his misery when Work and Ower projected six minutes of the fastest and funniest tumbling before his eyes. Six minutes is not the regulation length of an act in vaudeville but Work and Ower atoned for their brief appearance by the large quantity of astonishing wares they succeeded in pushing across the footlights in that limited time. It was simply a session of acrobatics with class, and there was steam behind every movement.

Another high temperature dish that proved satisfactory to the taste was served by Seymour Brown and Nat Ayer, who toyed nervously with a piano and some original songs. You laughed because you couldn't dodge the merriment that oozed from these young men. They made the most of their time on the programme and it was indeed hard to let them go.

Two strong men, billed as Bobby Pandur and Brothers—although there was only one brother—looked fit for battle under the strong light. They made simple work of what looked like hard labor, and with an attractive stage setting made an attractive picture.

In the work of Viola Gillette and George Macfarlane the audience was treated to a session of grand opera in soprano and baritone. Honors were about even vocally, but Miss Gillette had much the best of it from the viewpoint of those who enjoy seeing a pretty woman prancing about in boy's raiment.

Mrs. John Colby Abbott presented "La Grande Pandore" in a way that made it easy to understand the French fashions of centuries gone by, and other acts combined to make the performance worth while, even in the stress of hot weather.

American Music Hall.

The stock company at the American Music Hall presented Willie Collier and Grant Stewart's farce comedy, "Caught in the Rain." The same play was presented last Summer by Manager Morison in the American Music Hall, then the Orpheum. The performances yesterday were thoroughly enjoyable, and large hot-weather audiences were present to applaud the actors and their work. The farce comedy is a thoroughly American story. The stage settings are unusually fine. Wilson Melrose played Dick Crawford, a man who was brave when threatened by real danger, but bashful and shrinking in the presence of women. He did his work well and interpreted the lines and the difficult touches in the character in a very pleasing manner. Miss Rosalind Coghlan was the heroine. Muriel Mason and Miss Katherine Clinton acted the role of Violet Mason, the deliberate and haughty sister of the heroine. Miss Rose Morrison had the lines of Mrs. [illegible], and she interpreted them attractively and skilfully. Theodore Friebus, as the English swell, Bryce Forrester, did some fine character acting, while Richard Pitman, as Bob Livingstone, the man who was always hard up, made a hit. William Hasson, as George Washington White, the negro waiter, brought all the drollery and humor of the character to the surface. The other roles were all well taken care of by the different members of the stock company.

Majestic Theatre.

"Sapho," bearing the evidences of judicious pruning, was performed by the Charlotte Hunt Stock Company at the Majestic to large audiences. The revival of the Daudet play gave the Hunt players chances for some of the cleverest work they have done since the Summer stock opened.

The "Sapho" at the Majestic is not a whit the brazen lady as she was viewed in other editions of the French drama. There is no offence for even the most prudish playgoer. Even the stairway scene finds new expression at the hands of Miss Hunt and Richard Buhler, the capable leading man. As they enact it, the scene is enhanced in dramatic value, while at the same time its pristine warmth is tempered into a lighter vein. It is deliciously acted. Nor is the play as a whole insipid. Some clean comedy brightens Miss Hunt's production.

Mr. Buhler as Jean Gaussin came in for much applause for his excellent handling of the role. William Balfour made a good Dechelette. Harry Brooks was Uncle Cesaire. Others who contributed to an exceptionally good cast were James S. Bardett, William H. Evarts, Charles Stevens, Albert Hickey, Anna Kiley, Florence Hale, Olive Rea Temple, Eleanor Brownell, Ruth Copley, Eva Wheeler, Laura Danton and May Lorimer.

Monitor and Merrimac.

The opening performances of the battle between the Monitor and Merrimac at Revere Beach have been witnessed by large crowds. The realistic presentation of the historic battle has been received with enthusiasm, and many prominent Bostonians have been guests of the management at the early performances. Few events in history yield greater opportunities for display than the terrific conflict between the Monitor and Merrimac, and the reproduction at Revere Beach is marvellously well done.

Bass Point.

The week at Bass Point opened Sunday with record breaking crowds. The hotels were busy and the thousands who visited the resort found much to amuse them at the various concessions. There were band concerts at frequent intervals and in the Knickerbocker theatre a farce comedy called "The White Hat" was given.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The leading vaudeville feature at the Bowdoin Square theatre this week is furnished by Brown and Fanlardeau, who presented a new sketch called "Watch the Cigarette." Other novelties and motion pictures complete the bill.

Norumbega Park.

A splendid program of vaudeville features was presented at Norumbega Park yesterday, and the new open air theatre was crowded at both performances. Gordon and Stoddard, European instrumentalists, headed the bill, although the remaining acts were of the head-line variety.

Steamer Satellite.

Heavy traffic marked the trips of the steamer Satellite to the fishing grounds Sunday and yesterday. Passengers on the steamer reported cool weather and good fishing.

Scenic Temple.

A new program of motion pictures and vaudeville was offered at the Scenic Temple yesterday. There were illustrated songs, too, and an incidental concert program.

Paragon Park.

With the big free circus and elaborate fireworks display every Wednesday and Saturday evenings, there is little wonder that Paragon Park is one of the most popular amusement resorts on the coast. The Palm Garden is receiving large patronage this season.

Wonderland Park.

As the season moves forward the popularity of Wonderland Park increases. Of the many attractive features that draw crowds to the big enclosure none is more popular than the captive balloon.

Austin & Stone's.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. King, pool champions, continue this week at Austin & Stone's Museum, giving hourly exhibitions in the curio hall. A new vaudeville and picture program was presented yesterday in the theatre.

North Shore Trips.

The newly equipped steel steamer Cape Ann is carrying heavy traffic to Gloucester these warm days. The popularity of the line is enhanced by the delightful view of the North Shore afforded from the decks of the boat.

Globe Theatre.

An unusually strong programme was offered at the Globe Theatre yesterday. It was headed by La Rex and La Rex, Roman ring experts, who performed new feats of wonder. A half-dozen other vaudeville features, with illustrated songs and motion pictures, completed a bill that was well worth seeing.

King Philip Trips.

Those who made the trip to the fishing grounds yesterday on the steamer King Philip missed the terrific heat of the city and returned home with a good catch of fish. It never fails.

Hub Theatre.

Few picture houses offer better vaudeville and picture programmes than the Hub Theatre, and the new bill that was presented yesterday was up to the usual standard in every respect.

Lexington Park.

Few Summer resorts offer the advantages for recreation and amusement that can be found at Lexington Park, where the beautiful grounds are crowded with attractive features. The rustic theatre is presenting a new vaudeville progrom this week.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert Amory of Beacon street, and their trio of charming daughters, the Misses Mary Copley Amory, Katherine Amory and Margery Amory, have varied their plans this season and instead of going to Bar Harbor as usual, have settled near home and are occupying one of the finest estates at Nahant.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Cotton of Longwood, have joined the Marion colony, where their cottage "Four Firs" has been opened for the season.

* * *

Mrs. Osborne Howes of Brookline, has also arrived at Marion and will have with her during the season, her daughter Mrs. Charles Sidney Waldo, Jr.

* * *

Mrs. Horatio N. Slater of Pine Bank, Readville, has arrived in Europe where she went to join her son, Nelson Slater and her pretty daughter, Miss Esther Slater, who sailed shortly before with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hunt. They will all return to spend the late season at Bar Harbor. Miss Esther Slater, by the way, will be one of our most conspicuous buds the coming season. She is pretty, vivacious, has wealth at her command and will no doubt be one of the most feted of all the debutantes.

Colonial and Mrs. Henry May of Washington, have taken the Kimball cottage at Manchester for the Summer. Colonel May is a member of the New York Yacht Club, the Metropolitan, the Chevy Chase and the Country. His son, Henry Coleman May, is secretary of the American legation in Stockholm.

MODESTY.

MOGGS was returning to the clubhouse when Wilson met him.

"Well, how did you get on to-day?" queried Wilson.

"I never saw better golf," said Moggs. "My opponent got away every drive, he hit every brassey clean, he approached up to the hole perfectly, and he never missed a putt."

"How much were you beaten by?"

"Beaten! I wasn't beaten. I won!"

TILLINGHAST IS DECLARED O. K. AS AERONAUT

WORCESTER, July 12.—The airship in which Wallace E. Tillinghast says he circled about the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor, making the round trip from this city to the metropolis and return by way of Boston, is declared to be a reality and not a dream.

Secretary Herbert N. Davison of the Board of Trade and a reporter for a Worcester paper declare they have had a view of the sky wonder. They say that it is of the monoplane type and at present it is stored in the loft of a stable some miles out of this city.

The inventor says that the value of the airship is from $15,000 to $20,000, and that he has sold and delivered three machines already. Secretary Davison is authority for the statement that Mr. Tillinghast has New York capital of $12,000,000 to back him in the commercial manufacture of the aeroplanes.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

TRADING DULL IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, July 12.—Although railroad stocks opened strong and at about a point higher in Wall street to-day, industrial stocks were heavy. Amalgamated copper opened at the closing price of yesterday while Anaconda lost half a point. Steel was a fraction lower.

After the first few minutes of trading short coverings in the industrial group caused an advance of half a point, with Amalgamated rising one point.

Trading was dull with transactions in the active issues very light.

St. Paul rose nearly a point while the specialties were fractionally higher. American shares were irregular in London. Mining shares were dull on the Curb.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

State Street is convinced that the Standard Oil interests have experienced a change of heart and that they now are on the bull side of the market, temporarily at least.

$ $ $

The action of the market as a whole indicated an exhaustion of professional power and an impairment of professional prestige. Investors have been clearly awed by the late performance of the bears. Bull speculators have been cowed. But there is a limit to all extremes and it is hoped that the silent panic on 'change had recorded its worst last week. Henceforth any change must be for the better.

$ $ $

It is possible that the American copper syndicate may be carrying out its threat to bring the price down to 10 cents if the Amalgamated and other companies obdurately refuse to sanction a scheme of curtailed production. The syndicate is right. The output is too much in excess of consumption to hope for a betterment in the industry.

$ $ $

For the better part of the year the stop-loss order has been used more frequently by the bulls than the bears, but now the latter are resorting to it. This shows that they are not all sure that the predictions of evil that have been made will come true. Their conservatism is in marked contrast to their previous confidence.

$ $ $

The feeling is growing throughout the country that the Interstate Commerce Commission will agree to a raise in freight rates on the part of the railroads in consequence of the changed attitude of the shippers, who apparently have come to the conclusion that while the transportation lines have asked for too much, they are entitled to something.

$ $ $

Because of this inability to think independently the average trader loses many good opportunities to fatten his bank account. He takes it for granted that when stocks are at the top they must go higher, and when at the bottom must keep on receding.

$ $ $

The western banking position has been a source of considerable comment, not to say anxiety, but reports from the interior show quite clearly that there is no occasion for alarm. In the larger cities of the West the bankers themselves have no misgivings regarding the loans they have made, while they report quite a check in the land trading out there.

$ $ $

There is no question whatever as to the ability of Southern Pacific to pay 7 per cent. on its common stock, but the management of the property is so conservative that in all probability it will not consider the idea of doing anything in the way of adding to the payments made to holders of the stock. Since the death of Mr. Harriman his ideas as to the care and maintenance of the property have been strictly carried out.

$ $ $

It can be stated that the report of the American Car & Foundry Company for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1910, came up to the expectations of the stockholders in spite of the lull in the equipment business which has taken place since the first of the calendar year.

$ $ $

Virginia-Carolina's fiscal year, ended May 31 last, was fully up to the best expectations, the balance available for common dividends of $2,016,620 being equivalent to 10.42 per cent. on the common stock. This is by far the best showing the company has ever made and furnishes ample basis for the action of the directors in declaring a dividend of 5 per cent. on the common stock to be paid quarterly during the next year.

$ $ $

Northwestern's June car loading was nearly 120,000 cars, or more than 15 per cent. increase. Northwestern officials regard the crop outlook in their territory as favorable, most of the drouth-smitten area being north of their lines. They attach much importance to the increased acreage, high quality of seed and improved methods of farming.

$ $ $

The belief is growing that the country's harvest will be well above the average. It was hoped, and the outlook warranted the hope earlier in the season, that this would be a year of "bumper" crops. What is needed to-day is lower prices for breadstuffs, and the only way to ensure this is a great excess of supply over demand.

$ $ $

While there has been no improvement in steel conditions over the last few weeks, the industry has shown no further reaction in new orders. For the past month the Steel Corporation has been operating its mills 78 to 80 per cent. of capacity, and as stocks of iron have been decreasing, there will be no further curtailment of consequence in iron production in the immediate future.

$ $ $

On the 1,800 level of the Colorado mine of the Davis-Daly the main vein has been cut about 600 feet west of the shaft, where 800 feet of drifting has been done. The ore body is twelve to fifteen feet wide and continues throughout the entire drift. The average copper content is 3 per cent., and the silver about six ounces to the ton.

$ $ $

Mexico Consolidated Mining & Smelting stockholders are asked to contribute 5 cents per share to send a representative to the mines for the purpose of auditing the accounts.

$ $ $

Reports from the Rhode Island Coal Company are more than satisfactory. The new mining management is opening up coal of superior quality and the briquetting and other machinery plants are rapidly approaching completion. It is expected that next month the company will begin putting out at least 100 tons of commercial coal daily.

SUSPECT FOUL PLAY IN DEATH OF SEEKONK MAN

SEEKONK, July 12.—The state police have begun an investigation of the death of George O. Greene, a former town tax collector, who, after having been missing for a week, was found in the woods with a bullet hole in his temple and a revolver nearby. It was first supposed that he had shot himself and that theory was generally adopted. Now, however, new circumstances uncovered by the State detectives have started the report that the authorities believe Greene was a victim of foul play. There is a difference of opinion between the State police and Medical Examiner Charles T. Holden of Attleboro as to how Greene met his death.

A revolver was found about three feet from his body, lying near his left hand. The bullet wound was in his right temple and so far the State officials have been unable to learn whether or not Greene ever owned a revolver such as that which was found at his side with one chamber discharged.

Greene had been missing about a week. No one seems able to shed any light on the case and those who knew him are unable to advance any reason for Greene taking his own life.

State Detective Hodges states that he has not petitioned the court for an inquest as it would have to be held anyway.

"I found some suspicious circumstances," said he, "and we are going to try and clean the case up. If there was any foul play we are going to try and learn something of it."

Medical Examiner Charles T. Holden of Attleboro stated that he made a report to the effect that Greene's death was due to a revolver shot in the head, but that the manner of the death was unknown.

BURNED SKIRTS TO SIGNAL DISTRESS

HAMMOND, Ind., July 12.—Two women, who with their husbands, were adrift in a disabled launch on Lake Michigan, attracted the attention of lifesavers by waving blazing skirts as a signal of distress. The imperilled quartet, Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Staff of Helena, Mont., and M. S. Evers and wife of Hammond, Ind., were given prompt aid when the signal was observed.

Read These and Forget THE HEAT!

Oh, Foolish Woodchuck.

WINSTED, Ct., July 12.—William and Fred Mason of Newark, N. J., who are rusticating in Colebrook, discovered a large woodchuck in a field and getting a steel trap set it near the hole. On their next visit to the hole the trap, chain and stake were missing. Saturday they saw another chuck. This time they anchored the trap securely. Before church hour Sunday the boys went to learn what luck they had had. There was the woodchuck, with a trap on each forefoot.

Shirtsleeves in Church.

NEWBURG, July 12.—The clergymen of this city have started a shirtsleeve campaign. Already two of the ministers have announced that they will tolerate the appearance of the men in shirtsleeves at services during the hot weather.

Bingo! Ice Cream Is Swatted.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—"Nothing," says Dr. Wiley, chief of the Chemistry Bureau, "is more injurious than the habit of eating ice cream during the heated term. All sorts of germs are likely to be lurking in the cream from its being exposed only a short time to the sun and air, and besides it is liable to contain any number of harmful substances."

Bees Sail to Seek Honey.

NEW YORK, July 12.—A swarm of bees boarded the Hamburg-American liner Alleghany on the voyage from Port de Paix, via St. Marc, to this port. The bees were noticed hovering around one of the davits, and in ten minutes they had taken quarters in the best part of the ship. When the liner reached St. Marc, twenty-four hours later, the bees departed. Captain Meissner says there are practically no flowers in Port de Paix, but at St. Marc, where the bees left the ship, flowers grow in profusion.

First Motor Car Funeral.

RICHMOND, S. I., July 12.—Richmond had its first motor car funeral to-day. The procession consisted of four automobiles instead of the usual hearse and cabs. The deceased person was an infant. The coffin was in the first car with members of the immediate family.

An Obedient Son at 60.

NEW YORK, July 12.—"My mother told me it was cold and I should wear this overcoat until I got back home," was all the police could get out of a man about sixty years old they arrested at Dover, N. J., as a vagrant. He was buttoned up to the chin in a heavy ulster. He said he did not dare to remove the coat until he had his mother's permission. When he received his mother's instructions, or where, the police have not been able to learn.

Parrot Gets a Reprieve.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—On the outcome of a will contest in this jurisdiction hangs the life of a poll parrot. Polly got a reprive to-day when notice that the will of Mrs. Ottilie Stock, which provides, among other things, that the bird shall be chloroformed, will be questioned by Elizabeth Stock, her daughter, to whom was left $1 in money, two kitchen chairs, two pails and one broom.

Music Cheers These Cows.

MARQUETTE, July 12.—Music has been put to a practical use on the dairy farm of J. M. Longyear, at Ivy Lake. The cows are relieved of the irksome monotony of cud chewing and milk producing by selections played on a phonograph. The soothing effects of music, especially during milking time, have been found, it is said, especially successful with cows under official test. Several butter records of the farm are credited to the music.

$1,000,000 AUTO TAX FOR NEW YORK

ALBANY, July 12.—Secretary of State Koenig says the average daily receipts now for automobile licenses under the Callan law and also from chauffeurs' applications amounted to more than $5,000. Nearly one hundred clerks are kept busy attending to the rush of mail. Mr. Koenig says the State will receive more than $1,000,000 yearly under the Callan law.

CHILD FALLS FROM WINDOW IN SLEEP

The only injury six-year-old Emily Fernald of Lynn received in falling from a third-story window through which she walked in her sleep, was a fracture of the left wrist. The girl's screams awakened her parents, and she was hurried to the Lynn Hospital.

GIVES SETTING HEN COLD WATER CURE

WESTERLY, R. I., July 12.—Farmer Walter Russel Ross has invented a sure way of discouraging a setting hen and making her work the year around.

He fills an ordinary wash tub with two inches of cold water, puts the hen inside and covers the top. Finding sitting unpleasant she stands, and after she has stood twelve hours she is released, completely cured of her maternal desires.

GRAND PRIZE AUTO RACES PROMISE BIG

By J. C. KERRISON.

The three Marmon cars, which have been doing great work during the past few months, have been entered for competition in the Vanderbilt cup races on October 1, and the Grand Prize races to be held on October 15. These cars have been consistent performers in both road and track races having won their share of contests in the past, notably the Cobe trophy race which was won by Dawson, and the establishment of no end of world's records by Harroun. These two men will drive in these two contests.

Harroun is considered one of the "headiest" drivers of domestic production, as his driving is always brilliant and safe. Dawson, while not as well known to the motoring public as Harroun, has established a mark for himself in many hard fought long distance races. His winning of the Cobe trophy race, on the Indianapolis Speedway, July 4, was an achievement worthy of one who has had more years of training and experience.

Previous to this announcement, Mr. Vanderbilt announced the entry of three Benz cars to be driven by George Robertson, Barney Oldfield and Hemery, also, three Fiats to be piloted by Nazarro, De Palma and Wagner.

The international character of the Grand Prize race is now assured, and a world-beating entry list and record-beating results seem beyond question. The day of early declaring of entries is here, for no longer does a manufacturer or agent await the action of another. The track to be used is made up in part of the famous Motor Parkway and the highly improved road system of Nassau County, Long Island, and it is believed to be the fastest in the country. There are no railroad or trolley crossings and the surface is broad. Everything possible has been done to make it safe and fast.

The 1911 contest for the touring trophy donated by Prince Henry of Prussia, is to be a truly international affair, as part of the route to be covered by the contestants will be in Germany and part of it in Great Britain. The event will not only be an international affair, but will also be an interclub contest, as it will be a competition between teams representing the Imperial Automobile Club of Germany and the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain.

Each of the two organizations is to be permitted to nominate fifty cars to carry its colors. The route will be 2,500 miles in length, twice as long as the route for the 1910 contest, and no speed trials are to be included. Heretofore all the principal touring contests in Europe have been conducted by clubs or other organizations, with the entries made by the manufacturers or in a few cases by individuals. The annual tour for the Glidden trophy in this country was once conducted as an event for club teams, but has been purely an event for manufacturers in the last couple of years.

The Michelin Tire Company had plenty of reason for its oft repeated slogan of "Michelins as Usual" after the conclusion of the race meet at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway last Monday week. Cars equipped with Michelin tires won twenty-two of the twenty-six races that were decided during the three days of racing that began on July 1. In a number of cases not only the winning cars, but the first three or four machines to finish were all Michelin equipped.

The races captured by cars fitted with Michelin tires included the 200-mile race for the Cobe trophy, the 100-mile race for the Remy trophy and the fifty-mile race for the $1,000 trophy. Of the ten races on Friday, Michelins won nine; of the ten races on Saturday, Michelins won eight, and of the six races on Monday, July 4, Michelins won five.

RIVER BEARS ASHES OF ARTIST TO SEA

The remains of Charles Hazeltine, the Rhode Island artist recluse, were cremated at Forest Hills Cemetery and the ashes scattered on the waters of the Pawtuxet River, above the falls, so that they were carried down to Narragansett Bay and the sea.

This was the last wish of the hermit plaster-cast collector, and his son, W. C. Hazeltine of New York, saw that it was adhered to.

HILL PARTY TAKES SALMON BY TON

Protection and Education---for the Young.

Protection and Pensions for the Old.

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

Read part of a very fine sermon by the Rev. J. S. Ladd Thomas.

J. S. Ladd Thomas is pastor of the Austin Methodist Episcopal Church at Austin, near Chicago.

We gladly print for our readers some extracts from Mr. Thomas's recent sermon on the cruel treatment of children and of very old men.

The conditions which this clergyman describes are disgraceful to what we call civilization. We shudder when we read of ancient days, when old men and old women were killed by their own sons and daughters—because they were helpless and useless—and sometimes eaten after they were killed.

It seems horrible—almost impossible to believe—that the people living in the far North used to take the old father or the worn-out old mother, build a little house of ice, put the old and feeble man or woman inside the house with a very small amount of food, then block up the entrance with a huge cake of ice and leave the old there to die.

It is horrible to think that human beings were once so vile that they deliberately killed and ate the old people.

But do you think it half as criminal, half as shameful for ignorant savages to kill and eat the old, as it is for men of to-day, calling themselves civilized, to burn up children in the mines and the mills, to torment the old with anxiety, with hard work, poor pay and eternal uncertainty?

We wish that there were more sermons in the United States like that from which we give you here some extracts:

"The manual labor of little children and old men and women, practiced to such an appalling extent as it is to-day in this country, is a disgrace, an everlasting shame to our nation," said Mr. Thomas, in beginning his sermon. "Hard work never was intended for the very young or the very old, and it is up to us who live in a self-respecting community to see that the poor old men who are employed to sweep the streets of Austin and the still older men who are stationed at the railroad crossings are taken from their labor and pensioned sufficiently to permit them to live and keep their little homes in their last days. My idea is not to oust the old men to make way for the young, but to take care of them instead of demanding their feeble efforts in return for a paltry pittance.

Hardest Jobs for Aged

It is always the hard jobs and the sleepless ones that are given to the old men. The soft jobs are reserved for the young men of to-day. The night men on the elevated road stations, who are obliged to snatch a brief nap between trains when by all the laws of nature they should be in their beds, are never the young men. It is the old ones who get these jobs, because the better paying and easier ones are taken by the younger generation.

"In this prosperous nation of ours there ought to be some provision made for these old men, a system of pensioning them as the French government is doing. I am not a Socialist, but I am enough of one to see clearly the duty of our nation, and I have the courage of my convictions.

Wants Rest for Old Men.

"Old age should be peaceful as childhood should be playful, and neither the spirit of youth nor the sabbath of life should be subjected to manual labor such as is sanctioned at the present time by our own Government.

"It long has been said that only the heathen nations leave their old and infirm to die on the sands by the roadside, yet we American people, boasting of our patriotism and Christianity, are permitting as serous a crime to be perpetratd and are calmly looking on, disinterested and unthinking. It is high time we took the matter into our own hands and demanded proper care for the aged."

Common sense, true kindness and the principle that should guide government is in the Rev. Mr. Thomas's words!

"Old age should be peaceful, and childhood should be PLAYFUL."

There lies the duty of civilization, and even an imperfect, half-civilized "civilization" such as ours should be equal to the duty. Children should be protected against all work except the quiet, easy, simple discipline that will develop their minds. YOUTH SHOULD BE PLAYFUL.

And old age should be protected against work and anxiety. The old should be respected, honored, cared for, permitted to live out their full term, happy, free from care, PEACEFUL.

There will not be even the beginning of real civilization on this earth until it can be truly said that youth is PLAYFUL and old age PEACEFUL.

Nothing could possibly be viler than the sight of a little child going at daybreak to a mill where it is to work all day long, or an old gray-haired man seeking work, often vainly, BECAUSE HIS HAIR IS GRAY, and finds himself condemned to mean, underpaid night work—every advantage being taken of the helplessness of the old and of the feebleness of the young.

The Good Government Conference in Illinois Demands the Initiative and Referendum

Common Sense ALSO Demands It—And Demands, Above All, THE RECALL

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner.

In Illinois some rascals have been exposed, some have confessed, and the State is awake to the notion that grafting, bribery and the other details of modern "statesmanship" should be checked.

Virtuous and indignant citizens of Illinois, calling themselves "A Good Government Conference," have assembled at Peoria. One of their first announcement, is that they believe "in the Initiative and Referendum."

The announcement is wholesome but not surprising. The man who does NOT believe in the Initiative and Referendum is a pretty dull-minded sort of person—unless he happens to belong to the great crowd that does not know what Initiative and Referendum means.

This newspaper for years has been trying to impress upon voters the fact that when citizens employ a man as their servant they ought to keep track of him, THEY OUGHT TO CONTROL HIM as thoroughly as they would control an office boy or any other employe.

The Initiative and Referendum are essentials of good government under our system. If the Initiative and Referendum were universally applied the people could INITIATE or demand certain legislation, and they would be able to compel the lawmakers to REFER all laws to the people and abide by the people's decision.

In this way the citizens, when dissatisfied, could INITIATE or begin lawmaking to suit themselves. And they could thwart the schemes of the bribe givers by having laws REFERRED to them, and defeating laws passed or planned in the interests of dishonest corporations and others.

Even more important than the Initiative and Referendum is THE RECALL. The Recall means simply the right of the people to discharge a man whom they have elected and who proves himself unworthy.

When a business man or anybody else employs a certain individual and puts him to do certain work the distinct understandng is that if the work isn't done properly the person hired will be discharged.

Is there any sensible reason why voters who with their votes elect or hire lawmakers, mayors, governors, presidents, judges and others, should not reserve to themselves the right to RECALL or DISCHARGE such an employe if found useless, stupid, dishonest or otherwise incapable?

If the people had the RECALL, the Initiative and Referendum would be less imperative. For with the Recall in force the lawmakers would know and realize the penalty of dishonesty or indifference, and they would try really to REPRESENT the voters and do their lawmaking in accordance with the public's wishes.

The idea that every man with a vote should carry constantly in the back of his head is this:

What is the use of republican government when you allow the bosses to pick out your officials, and then have the officials working in obedience to the bosses' orders, working in obedience to the givers of bribes?

And what is the use of giving your votes to men and putting them in office unless you keep in your hands the power TO RECALL THEM, the power to DISCHARGE THEM WHEN THEY ARE UNFAITHFUL, AS YOU WOULD DISCHARGE AN UNFAITHFUL OFFICE BOY OR CLERK?

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES OF Slavery or Freedom

WINIFRED BLACK

By Winifred Black

A YOUNG woman who was in trouble with the police the other day happened to be unusually pretty and unusually well educated, as far as the education which comes in books goes.

So she was interviewed by every newspaper in town, and to every newspaper in town she told the same incredible, amazing story.

She said that she was a girl of good family, dependent upon herself for a living. She was a competent stenographer and made a decent living salary.

"But," said this young person, "I was sick and tired of being a slave—a wage slave, so I deliberately went into this sort of life."

And several of the newspapers thereupon took occasion to wax sentimental over the young person and her desperate attempt to escape from slavery.

Escape from slavery! Why the poor thing never knew what slavery was 'till she threw away her honest name and went down into the horrible slavery of vice.

Her name isn't her own now. It belongs to the police. She's a suspicious character and can be arrested anywhere, anytime, on any pretext, and thrown into a pen with the outcasts of humanity and she has no redress of any kind.

Her soul isn't her own. Her mind isn't her own. Her poor wretched body does not belong to her now. Why even the clothes on her back are bought and paid for by the cruelest kind of a slave driver. A slave driver who will make her pay in agony and in humiliation and in tears for every thread she wears.

Slavery! Why the man in the chain gang is as free as air compared to this poor slave of her own folly.

A slave was she when she worked honestly for an honest living. Well, then, who is free?

The mother with her little brood clinging to her skirts?

The wife who cannot go from one place to another without asking her husband?

The society leader who hasn't an hour to call her own within the twenty-four?

Slavery! Why if work and responsibility be slavery, no decent, honorable human being is free or ever will be.

Who are these daughters of luxury who imagine that they can escape the common fate of common humanity?

Does a stenographer's tooth ache any harder than the tooth of this woman who dares to try believe herself free, her license, liberty?

Is it any easier to grow old with the scorn of the world to face than it is to slip into the meridian of life with the respect of your little circle and the love of your few devoted friends?

Who are you, poor, foolish little thing, that you could not bear to work for a living like the rest of the honest women in the world?

A wage slave! I hate that expression. A wage free woman. That suits me better.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About A Visit to Hyde Park

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA & Ma & me went over to Hyde Park last nite to see sum frends of Pa's. Ma & Me dident want to go, but Pa was so anxshus to go that Ma thought we mite as well take the trip. The naim of the folks that we went to see was the Elthringtons. Thay caim from an old English fambly, Pa toald Ma. Ma dident cair what kind of a fambly thay caim from, but she went to plese Pa.

Mister Elthrington was the funniest man wich I have ever saw. He was about four (4) feet tall, & he was neerly that wide. I meshured his sholders with my tape meshur wen he wasent looking. I wish I cud have meshured his noase, it was so long as the noase of Mister Mutt. Missus Elthrington was a vary sweet looking lady. I think it is funny how many sweet looking ladys marries men wich looks like White Wings.

Wife, sed Pa to Ma, I want you to meet Mister Elthrington beekaus maybe he knows sum of yure relativs that used to live in England. I was telling him last nite that yure naim beefour you was married was Drummond.

Quite so, sed Mister Elthrington, quite so. I have knowed quite a lot of Drummonds. I met one of them in a poker game one night at my club, & he bally well trimmed me, sed Mister Elthrington. I doant know what he had on his fingers that made the cards stick to them, he toald Ma, but it must have been beeswax, beekaus he certingly put the bee to me.

How vary interesting, sed Ma. I am vary sure it couldn't have been one of our grate fambly, sed Ma, beekaus thare was never a gambler in the Drummond fambly. Sumtimes, Ma sed, I regret that we dident have a few short-card sharks in our fambly tree. Maybe if we had had, I wuddent have had to marry this. Then Ma pointed to Pa.

I newver knew that my husband played cards, sed Missus Elthrington. She was looking at her husband vary hard. Oh, well, sed her husband, I never played for vary much after I married you. I doant beleeve you, sed Missus Elthrington. I newver saw a man that I wud beleeve.

Well, sed Ma, you haven't got anything on me. I have been wed for six (6) happy, golden yeers, & my husband newver took his hat off the rack but what I thought, Well, here cums the big stall. Time & aggenn, Ma sed, wen he caim hoam the next morning & toald me about riteing a sketch for Lew Dockstader, I had to laff.

I doant beleev I can blaim you a bit, sed Missus Elthrington. You see, us girls is so helpless. We can't go out at nites. We have to set in the house & wait & wait & wait. I newver met a man like my husband, she toald Ma. For a man of sum reefinement, he has moar tramp frends than anybody I ewver saw.

So has my husband, sed Ma. It seems strange to me. Now & then my husband meets sum nice chaps, but nine (9) out of ten (10) that I see him walking & talking with looks like the last survivors of the retreet from Moscow.

Well, old man, sed Pa to Mister Elthrington, let us all go out, you & me & little Bobbie, & give the ladies a chanst to sting us.

So Pa & his frend & me all went out for a walk & I will newver know what was sed about us men.

Summer Fiction a la Mode

Warranted Not to Flutter the Drowsiest Hammock Reader.

By WEX JONES

POLLY wasn't in the Summer house. She must be down by the rocks. I caught sight of a pink skirt.

My guess had been right.

Polly did not look up.

I coughed.

"The sea,' I began.

It seems so easy to say something about the sea—until you try. I find the sea one of the most difficult conversational topics there is, but as the blooming thing was swish-swashing at our feet it looked as if I must say something or other about it.

So I began again.

"The sea," I said. "The sea—er—is wonderful, isn't it? So big and—er—salt, you know."

The figure in pink merely tucked her feet up a little and made no response.

Evidently my remarks about the sea had been wasted, so I racked my brain for another topic, but the only one I could think of was the land, and it is even harder to say anything about the land than it is about the sea.

Suddenly Polly looked up.

In thoroughly fashionable and proper Summer fiction everything, as you probably know, must be done on a separate line. No well-bred Summer heroine, for instance, would think of looking up and saying anything in the same line. Such haste would be most unladylike.

"It's nice to be alone," said Polly.

"Great," said I. "What is nicer than to be alone with the one"——

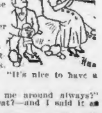
"I don't mean that kind of alone-ness," said Polly.

Then she resumed her reading, while I tried and tried to think of something I could say about the land.

Finally I began.

"Ever think about the vastness of a continent," I asked "especially when compared with an island—a small island?"

No response, and I had exhausted all the topics available.



Just then Polly shrieked wildly.

[Even in this moment of stress, note that Polly did not jump up until the next line.]

She jumped to her feet.

I rushed forward.

I brushed the caterpillar from her neck.

"Ooh," said Polly. "It's nice to have a man around.

"Won't you have me around always?" I asked. (Rather neat?—and I said it as quick as that.)

With the memory of the caterpillar still fresh, she couldnt' resist.
